Mandarins Get Merit Hikes Only

The provincial government's highest-paid civil servants will in future get pay hikes based on performance under a new plan being introduced.

Finance Minister Evan Wolfe also announced salary increases averaging 5.7 per cent for the 1,400 public service employees not covered by a collective agreement.

He said the new job evaluation and salary administration plan. will relate salary increases to an individuaL's effort and performance.

Wolfe said this program will allow the government to maintain an acceptable correlation between the levels of executive compensation in the public service with practice in the private sector.

Performance evaluations will be made prior to any individual increase, said Wolfe.

The increase, retroactive to last Oct. 1, covers management executive employees up to and including deputy ministers.

SMASH KILLS YOUTH

One youth is dead and another in critical condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital after a car smashed into a power pole near the intersection of Cameron-Taggert Road north of Shawnigan Lake Thursday night.

Shawnigan Lake RCMP identified the dead youth as Bruce McAdam, 16.

In critical condition is David Couzens, 16.

A third youth in the car, Bill Johnson, 17, is in satisfactory condition in Cowichan District Hospital in Duncan.

All three are from the Cobble Hill area and were southbound on Cobble Hill Road when the accident occurred shortly after 9 p.m.

Police, assisted by volunteer members of the Mill Bay fire department, used the Jaws of Life cutting tool to free the youths from the wreckage.

A police spokesman said it is not known who was the driver.

The power pole was toppled, causing a widespread power failure. It took B.C. Hydro crews nearly two hours to restore service.

Euphoria Ends

The U.S. dollar fell against all major European currencies today as euphoria ended over the U.S. treasury's decision to support the U.S. currency by selling gold.

In New York, the Canadian dollar was down 1-20 at $0.8739.

WAGNER TO SENATE

OTTAWA (CP) — Claude Wagner, Progressive Conservative MP for the Quebec riding of St. Hyacinthe, resigned his Commons seat today and was appointed to the Senate.

Commons Speaker James Jerome said today as the Commons resumed sitting that Wagner's riding has become vacant because of a resignation.

The urbane MP, runner-up to Opposition Leader Joe Clark in a party leadership race in February, 1976, returned to the House recently following a lengthy illness.

Wagner, 53, had been confined at home for about four months before he eventually returned to public life early this year. Nature of his illness was never officially disclosed, although there were reports he was suffering from cancer.

Wagner's resignation cuts the Conservative party's strength in Quebec to two MPs — Roche LaSalle (Joliette) and Heward Grafftey (Brome Missisquoi).

Opposition Leader Joe Clark welcomed the move, saying Wagner had served Quebec and the country with distinction.

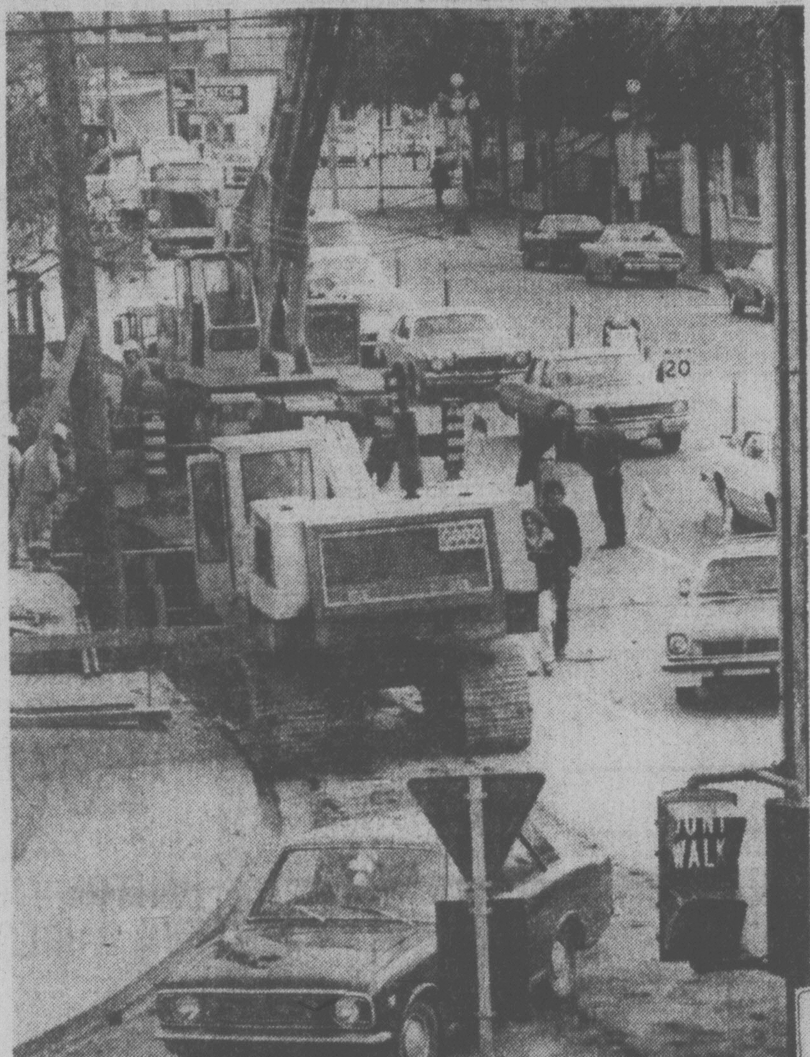
Barracks Stormed

BEIRUT (AP) — Rebel officers and soldiers loyal to Palestinian guerrillas stormed a Lebanese barracks north of Israeli occupation lines Thursday, but there were no reports of casualities or the extent of damage.



TRAFFIC SNARL—UP time is back again, as city streets sprout big holes, diversion signs and long lines of backed-up vehicles. One of the worst spots is Douglas just south of the intersection with Bay, where workmen are installing a new deep sewer, 14 or 15 feet down. The job is laboriously slow, a city official explained today, because the material is a mixture of rock, requiring blasting, and old landfill which tends to be unstable and involves extra precautions for safety reasons. Further traffic restrictions lie ahead, including closure of Bay Sunday April 30, but once the intersection itself has been completed the project will be shelved until the fall. Eventually, the sewer line will head east at Kings. (John McKay photo).

Still MP Work Before Vote: Trudeau

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau said Thursday he has set no date for a general election and wants to clear up some parliamentary business before naming the day.

"Apart from being a politician and concerned with elections, I have to manage the business of government and I have important business before the House," Trudeau told his weekly press conference. (See also page 30).

"No date has been set for an election. When it is, I will tell you."

Some speculation centred on announcement this weekend of a June election.

Trudeau's response to questions about the date of the expected election followed government efforts in the Commons to cool speculation that an election call is imminent.

An election might serve, however, as the best vehicle to debate constitutional proposals, Trudeau said.

The prime minister told the news conference he has not yet decided whether to introduce proposed constitutional amendments in Parliament or in an election campaign many MPs expect will soon begin.

However, he said he had suggested to his Liberal caucus that if the provincial and federal governments are unable to agree on constitutional amendments, it might be best to take the proposals to the people. The new government would then have a clear mandate.

Trudeau also said he considers the question of capital punishment settled despite growing indications it will again be an issue during the anticipated general election.

"As far as I'm concened the matter is settled," Trudeau told his news conference.

Polls published Wednesday showed 82 per cent of Canadians favor a referendum on the question of hanging.

B.C. Vows To Probe RCMP

Allegations that the RCMP carried out hundreds of "intelligence probes" and break-ins without warrants in B.C. will be investigated by Attorney-General Garde Gardom.

Gardom said he knew nothing about the RCMP's illegal activities.

If there was a need for such break-ins because of B.C. serious drug trafficking problems, Gardom said, he wants guidelines drawn up to state precisely what measures the RCMP may or may not use.

It was revealed this week at the McDonald royal commission on abuse of police powers by the RCMP that 402 out of 419 illegal break-ins had occurred in B.C.

NDP MLA Ejected

NDP MLA Lorne Nicolson was ejected from the legislature this morning for calling Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf a liar.

When Nicolson, the member for Nelson-Creston, refused to withdraw the statement, Speaker Harvey Schroeder asked the Sargeant-At-Arms to escort him from the house.

It was the first ejection of this season, the first time Nicolson has ever been thrown out of the house and the first heave-ho order issued by Schroeder since he became speaker.

Nicolson rose on a point of order during debate on the budget and said Bawlf's comment that Nicolson failed to say one word about conservation during his earlier speech was "a damned lie" and said Balwf was a liar.

TRIO STEAL $7 AT KNIFE POINT

Three teenage occupants of a group home are being sought after the home's operators were robbed of $7 at knifepoint Thursday night.

The robbery was one of two overnight.

A Victoria police spokesman said the suspects — two girls aged 15 and 16 and a boy aged 16 — fled after the couple at the Royal Victoria Group Home, 1250 Balmoral, were held up and robbed about 9.45 p.m.

The spokesman said the three residents of the home brandished knives and made threatening gestures towards the couple, whose names are being withheld.

Meanwhile Saanich police are looking for two men and two women who robbed a 23-year-old man of $109 early today.

A spokesman said Kenneth Stewart had joined the foursome at the Bastion Inn on Government and they offered to drive him home.

In the 100-block Maddock, Stewart and one of the men got out of the car and went to the back of a house where the man produced a knife and told Stewart to hand over his wallet.

Airliner Forced Down By Soviet Jet Fighters

Times News Services

MOSCOW (CP) — A South Korean Boeing 707 airplane flying the North Polar route from Tokyo to Anchorage with 110 persons on board was forced to land by Soviet fighter planes after violating Russian airspace, the official Tass news agency said today.

Premier Alexei Kosygin confirmed that interceptors ordered the jetliner to land on Soviet territory and said two of the plane's passengers were dead, Japanese sources said.

It was not immediately known how they died.

But in Washington, a U.S. official claimed Soviet jet fighters fired at the jetliner.

Similar reports came from Japanese sources in Moscow and Tokyo.

In Seoul, Korean Airline navigation experts said there may have been a hijacking attempt since the pilot would have had to make a 90 degree turn to stray into Russian air space after taking off from Paris. They said a navigational error of that magnitude was "unthinkable."

Official Soviet sources told Western correspondents "there is no provocation in the incident."

Fifty-one of the 110 persons aboard the Korean Air Lines Boeing 707 were reported to be Japanese. The nationalities of the dead and injured were not known.

Soviet officials said the two passengers were killed when the Boeing 707 made a hard landing on a frozen lake south of Murmansk after it was ordered to land by Soviet fighter planes for violating Russian airspace.

A duty officer at Murmansk Airport said the jetliner had been ordered to land at Murmansk but came down far south of the airfield, damaging one wing.

The official new agency Tass said it flew over the Soviet Kola Peninsula, a highly sensitive area where Russian naval and rocket forces are located in heavy concentrations, and then continued southward.

The agency said the cause of the violation of the country's air space was being investigated while the passengers and crew were taken to the nearest town where arrangements were being made for them to leave the Soviet Union.

Earlier, Canadian officials initiated a major search operation of the Arctic from the Mackenzie River estuary in the Beaufort Sea to Ellesmere Island before word came that the airliner was on the ground in the Soviet Union.

Israel Stiffens Passover Patrols

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — Israel tightened its security precautions and mobilized thousands of soldiers and police today to prevent a possible Palestinian guerrilla strike during the Passover holiday that began at sunset.

Helicopter and motorcycle patrols added to the security screen along the tar-stained beaches from the Lebanese frontier south to Sinai and in forested picnic areas. Guerrillas previously have struck from the sea.

Troops and black-uniformed police, bolstered by green-bereted border police and civil defence units, set up roadblocks on major roads to check vehicles and their passengers.

The security precautions were among the most intensive undertaken for a holiday period.

The guerrillas generally have not struck Israel during holidays, possibly because of the heightened precautions. But Egypt and Syria chose the most solemn Jewish holiday, Yom Kippur, to launch a combined surprise attack in October, 1973.

Lt.-Gov. Praised

Premier Bill Bennett said Thursday he is pleased with the appointment of Henry Bell-Irving as successor to retiring Lieut.-Gov. Walter Owen.

"B.C. has been fortunate to have had the services of distinguished lieutenant-governors," Bennett told a news conference.

"The men who have served in Government House over the years have always had a strong commitment to community life in our province and have had distinguished careers in both public and private service."

He said that Bell-Irving, like Owen, has had particular interest in service to young people.

"Brigadier Bell-Irving has served on the oard of the Children's Hospital which is der construction in Vancouver," Bennett d.

"He brings to his new position services to his community through his association with the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, the Vancouver Board of Trade, the Vancouver Real Estate Board and the Canadian Real Estate Association."

Prime Minister Trudeau announced Thursday that Bell-Irving will become lieutenant-governor of B.C. and that Senator Jean-Pierre Cote will assume the same role in Quebec.

Bell-Irving is chairman of the board of A. E. Lepage Western Ltd.

Both men have had long associations with the Boy Scout movement. Brig. Bell-Irving is vice-president of the Boy Scouts of Canada while Senator Cote was commissioner of the movement in the St. John's, Que. area.

Spinks Arrested On Dope Charges

Times News Services

ST. LOUIS — Heavyweight boxing champion Leon Spinks was arrested early today and charged with suspected possession of cocaine and marijuana.

He was later released on $3,700 Bail.

Spinks was stopped about 4 a.m. for driving without headlights. Sgt. Francis Corona, who said he did not recognize Spinks, approached him and asked for his driver's licence.

But Spinks, who had been arrested two months ago for driving without a licence and travelling the wrong way on a one-way street, again had no licence.

"I asked him for his licence," Corona said, "and he said something to the effect of, 'Come on, man. I'm Leon. You know I still don't got one.'"

Spinks threw his hat onto the top of the car as he got out, Corona said, and a search of the hat uncovered in the hatband a foil packet containing a substance believed to be cocaine.

The last time Spinks was arrested the NAACP protested the manner in which he was handled, including his being handcuffed. But Corona said the handcuffs were necessary again because he was being arrested on a suspected felony. "That's just procedure," Corona said.

B.C. Tel Spending $40M on Island

Most of the $40.6 million to be spent by B.C. Telephone Co. upgrading its island divison this year will be spent in Victoria, including major electronic improvements for the city and Oak Bay.

The company plans to put additions in two electronic offices as part of the $23.9 million — 59 per cent of the island budget — being spent in the Victoria district.

The Nanaimo area will get $9.7 million, including improvements at Duncan and Port Alberni, and the Campbell River district $7 million.

Victoria district will get $13 million of $16.3 million allocated for central office switching equipment throughout the division. Addition of 32,000 lines to the Yates Street office will be completed in November and another 20,000 will be installed early next year for a total cost of $7.8 million.

Work starts this year to add 15,600 lines to the Oak Bay system at a cost of $500,000, for completion in the spring of 1979.

At Albion central in Saanich, 12,300 new lines will be put in by 1979, with other additions slated for Keating, Sidney and Sooke, largely due to residential growth.

Demand in North Saanich and Sidney has increased with the opening last year of the Institute of Ocean Sciences at Patricia Bay, with some parallel increase in marine-oriented enterprises.

BCT will spend more than $240,000 for underground cable from the Keating exchange and $167,000 for cable and conduit from the Sidney office to Swartz Bay. A further $285,000 will go for new lines in Sooke area.

Total Victoria district spending for cable will be more than $2.6 million.

Up-island improvements will include the addition of automatic number identification equipment in Campbell River district between Cumberland and Port Hardy.

Division customer service manager George Holmes said the company expects to install 14,800 new phones in the island division this year for a total 308,661.

Ban Bill Passes

OTTAWA (CP) — A special bill to ban a postal strike during a federal election campaign was given final parliamentary approval Thursday when the Senate passed the contentious measure.

The bill has been described as "a repressive piece of legislation" by the Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW) and many senators expressed reservations before giving their final approval.

"I wish it were possible to work up a little enthusiasm for this sad little bill," said Progressive Conservative Senator Duff Roblin of Manitoba.

Prime Minister Trudeau's Liberal administration has had 10 years to solve the problems in the post office, but has failed to do so and "the real significance of this legislation . . . is that it is a petition in bankruptcy with respect to postal matters and with respect to the industrial relations policy which the administration has been following," Roblin said during Senate debate.

FRUIT SALES OKAYED

The long list of tourist oriented vendors who want to peddle wares on the Inner Harbor causeway grew again Thursday when Victoria council's finance committee gave approval for the selling of fruit from a cart.

Another application to sell flowers was tabled because the committee wanted a detailed description of the cart the flowers are to be sold from. That application will probably be approved at the next meeting of the committee.

Also receiving a nod from the committee was an applicant who wants to operate bicycle-powered rickshaws in the city. The pedicabs will operate generally in the area of the causeway, but may roam elsewhere.

The committee also rejected a couple of bids, however, turning down applicants who wanted to sell balloons and postcards.

School Levies Rising

This year's education tax levies will be 45.48 mills in the Greater Victoria school district and 46.9 mills in Saanich school district, which represent increases over last year of 1.8 mills and a little more than one mill respectively.

The final determination of tax levies by the education ministry Thursday leave District 61 (Greater Victoria) with a four-per-cent mill rate increase, and District 63 (Saanich) with a two-percent increase.

But those percentages do not necessarily reflect how much individual taxpayers will have to pay. Changes in the assessment act mean that some will find their taxes increased by more than average while others will pay less.

Also complicating the picture is the fact that the assessment base in both school districts increased about 10 per cent this year. One mill is worth $632,000 in the Greater Victoria school district this year, up from $570,000 last year, while in Saanich a mill will raise $120,000, or $10,000 more than last year.

Greater Victoria school district will spend $46.9 million this year while Saanich school district has budgeted $12.5 million.

B.C. RAIL RECONSIDERS

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Railway Thursday agreed to reconsider the notice it gave before transferring a Lillooet employee to its Squamish operations.

Stan Horodyski, regional chairman of the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen, said that after the 270 carmen located along the line returned to work on Wednesday the company agreed to give Larry Read, originally slated to start in Squamish on Monday, until May 1 to move.

Lower Canadian Dollar Boosting BCFP Profits

VANCOUVER (CP) — Shareholders of British Columbia Forest Products Ltd. received more good news at the annual meeting Thursday as the company reported increased profits in its first quarter.

Ian Barclay, chairman and chief executive officer, said profits were $11.9 million on sales of $154.1 million, compared to $7.3 million on sales of $101 million for the same period last year.

Earnings per common share were $1.55, compared to 94 cents for the first three months of last year.

Major contributions to the company's improved performance were the exchange rate on the Canadian dollar and the performance of the Blandin Paper Co. in Minnesota, acquired by the company last August. Blandin's contribution to earnings represented 39 cents a share.

Exchange, exclusive of Blandin, on the conversion of U.S. dollars accounted for an increase in the company's net sales of $7.9 million compared to the same period last year.

The exchange gain accounted for a 50-cent-per-share increase in after-tax earnings compared to 24 cents for the same period last year.

UIC FRAUD RING SMASHED

MONTREAL (CP) — RCMP say a series of 34 raids in the Montreal area Thursday succeeded in breaking up a scheme which had been defrauding the Unemployment Insurance Commission of about $6,000 a week for the last four months.

Police said two men were arrested and they are investigating the possible involvement of nine more persons.

However, there were no immediate plans to charge one of the men arrested Thursday. He was turned over to Montreal municipal police, who said he had 10 traffic violations outstanding.

The other man was to be charged with defrauding the UIC of $22,000, attempting to defraud it of an additional $75,000, and conspiracy to defraud it of $325,000.

Police said $325,000 is the amount the plan would have netted in a year of full-scale operation.

Police seized the contents of a safety deposit box which yielded $17,000 in cash, 25 blank birth certificates and numerous medicare and social insurance cards.

Highest Profit Yet For Herring Roes

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia fishermen pulled in a smaller catch of roe herring this year than 1976, but their income was the highest ever, preliminary figures from the federal fisheries department showed Thursday.

The figures show the total catch was just under 70,000 tons, with gillnetters picking up about 38,000 tons of the total and seiners about 31,000 tons.

Fishermen received an average of $800 a ton for a total landed value to them of $56 million, the figures show.

Last year, the total catch was 81,000 tons but the average to the fishermen was $285 a ton.

The average income for seiners was $109,000, compared with $58,000 last year, and $28,000 for gillnetters, compared with $9,000 in 1977.

Fisheries economist Dr. Chris Newton estimated the total processed value of the 7,800 tons of roe at $101 million. The only market for the roe is Japan.

Newton attributed part of the increased prices paid to fishermen to the smaller catch and to the decline of the Canadian dollar against the Japanese yen, a fall of about 30 per cent from last year.

He also said that increasing Japanese control of B.C. processing companies resulted in a price war on the fishing grounds.

PENTICTON (CP) — Outrage over RCMP tactics during a raid on an Indian village in the Queen Charlotte Islands led to the transfer of the officer responsible, but the incident has soured relations between Indians and police in the northern British Columbia community.

RCMP Superintendent Howard Gillard of the Prince Rupert subdivision confirmed in a telephone interview Thursday that Sgt. Ken Buck left the Masset detachment April 17, primarily because of the raid Feb. 17 on five houses in the Haida community at Old Massett.

Residents said about 10 officers conducted the raids, damaging property and threatening several men with shotguns.

"This massive show of force and lack of consultation just threw us back into a bad situation," Rev. John A. MacKenzie, an Anglican priest at Old Massett, said in a telephone interview. "What happens now is that any time police have to legitimately pick up a kid, it gets blown way out of proportion."

MacKenzie was one of several community leaders who wrote letters calling for the removal of Buck.

In a letter to lawyer Carey Linde of the Haida Counselling and Legal Assistance Society, MacKenzie said he was called to the scene of one raid just after it had finished, then witnessed another at the home of a native Anglican deacon.

"I sat in shock," he wrote, "in the early hours in the morning, wondering what kind of police state was happening if 10 policemen were required to enter the house of one of our ministers, a house occupied by he and his wife and two juveniles, one of whom is a server of our church."

Gillard said the police — several of them auxiliary constables called out to reinforce the five-man Masset detachment — were apparently searching for handguns believed to be in the possession of several juveniles. However, the only weapon seized was a starter's pistol.

"It was simply racist, the most blatant example of the prevailing racism that police have to Indians," Linde said in an interview here Thursday. "They just went so far overboard."

Linde said he hesitated to make the incident public because he didn't trust an internal police investigation and first wanted to assemble the information himself.

"I've made complaints to police before, and neither I nor the band felt they'd been dealt with satisfactorily," he said. "This was such a gross attack on the integrity of the community that I had to get everything down before an outside investigation came in and people started to clam up."

Gillard agreed that Buck's action "was not the type of action we would expect in a community of this nature."

Old Massett's 600 residents, mostly Haida, live about five kilometres from new Masset, where the RCMP detachment is stationed in a community of about 2,000.

MacKenzie said the situation between police and Indians has improved since he arrived in the community four years ago, and he deplored the police's failure to continue that trend by first consulting with the band council in this situation.

Shooting Victim's Body Recovered

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police said today the body of a teen-age girl recovered by the coast guard was that of Leola Guliker, 16, one of four victims of a shooting last July in the Fraser Valley community of Rosedale, B.C.

The body, which was recovered today off the city's Point Grey area, had been in the water for some time and showed signs of stab wounds, police said.

Four teen-agers were shot and stabbed to death last July. The bodies of three youths were recovered from the Fraser River, but Miss Guliker's body was never found.

Walter Murray Madsen, 24, was sentenced Monday to life in prison after being found guilty of the murders.

Who Polices the Police?

It becomes more and more difficult to place much credibility in the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. The latest scandal involving the force had assistant commissioner Thomas Venner admitting to the McDonald royal commission this week that Mounties had committed at least 400 breakins without search warrants since 1970.

Until now, the skeptical were prepared to believed that the rot went no further than the RCMP's security service, almost a separate police force. A barn-burning, a few suspected individuals detained against their will, theft of dynamite to make it seem Quebec terrorists were active, a phoney FLQ communique issued.

Protection of the state. National security. Anti-terrorist prevention measures. Counterespionage. That type of activity.

But the admission of hundreds of breakins, almost all of them in British Columbia, (The Globe and Mail has quoted sources in the RCMP which say the actual total runs into the thousands), suggests that police abuse of the law spread beyond the elite security service.

RCMP officers investigating drug trafficking or the involvement of businessmen in financing illegal "get-rich-quick" schemes or organized crime figures broke into suspects' homes and offices on fishing trips ("surreptitious entry intelligence probes" is the force's sanitary term for them).

The fact that the RCMP broke the law repeatedly is sad enough; worse is the attitude in the force that because they had no criminal intent and were only trying to get the goods on bad guys, they didn't do anything wrong. Venner said such break-ins were at the very least "defendable morally and ethically."

Such philosophical contortions in defence of law-breaking suggest the RCMP believes any means justify the end. They had to break the law to preserve it. We've crossed a significant boundary here — usually someone who broke the law was apprehended by the police. Now the police themselves break the law to arrest miscreants. It's a very short step from there to breaking the law to go after complete innocents.

Electoral Tinkering

What if they called a royal commission and nobody came? Former provincial court judge Lawrence Eckardt is finding out these days as he makes his lonely trek around the province trying to find out what electoral reform the public wants.

The silence has been deafening, complains Eckardt. Although he scheduled hearings of his one-man commission in various cities, few people have bothered to attend. In Sidney on Tuesday, nobody at all came.

No one from the city council attended. No one from the MLA's office (Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis) came. No businessmen or representatives of the political parties, either.

Eckardt appears to have largely overestimated his fellow citizens' interest in psephological matters, and scheduled several dozen public hearings through March, April and May that must be the most poorly attended of any royal commission in a long, long while.

While this is surely discouraging to one who takes his work seriously, the obvious conclusion Eckardt should ponder, if he hasn't come to it already, is that there is little interest in tinkering with the present electoral system except among a few interested specialists and politicians with special interests.

There has been no cry from the heart of the body politic for radical changes in the way we choose a provincial government and the mechanics of elections, despite the cryptic statements of Premier Bill Bennett, which seemed to favor the transferable ballot, at the time he established the commission.

He and J.V. Clyne appear to be the only British Columbians interested in reviving this electoral quirk, used only once in the province, to keep the socialists out in 1952. Nobody else has shown much interest in this goofy idea.

Redistribution is the only reform measure that all agree must be done, since the province still votes according to outdated statistics compiled in the 1966 census. Thus some voters in sparsely-settled rural areas have a voice in choosing legislators that outweighs urban voters a dozen to one. It is manifestly unfair. That is a tedious drafting job perhaps, hardly as much fun as indulging in debate of the more arcane electoral devices that man has devised, but one that needs badly to be done.

Better to put ideas of tinkering with special ballots and measures of proportional representation back on the shelf and get on to the necessary work of a redistribution commission. The public has "voted" with overwhelming apathy to discourage any serious talk of implementing the former.

Ryan Will Undercut Trudeau

QUEBEC CITY — If Pierre Elliott Trudeau's face looks crafted by a sculptor, Claude Ryan's looks gouged by a glacier — hooked nose bent to the right, cavernous eyes, a jutting, indented jaw and high, hard cheekbones.

Comparisons between Trudeau and Ryan are inevitable. Federal-provincial Affairs Minister Marc Lalonde recognized this when, at noon on the day the Quebec Liberals elected Ryan as leader, he lunched with the seven provincial Liberal leaders attending the convention.

Would Ryan's election undercut Trudeau's political appeal, Lalonde asked his guests? Yes, came the unanimous reply. Should Trudeau therefore call an election as quickly as possible? Yes, replied the party's English-Canadian barons. To both answers, Lalonde nodded his own agreement.

Patient, Introspective

The most obvious reason Ryan will undercut Trudeau's political appeal is that federalist Quebecers at last have a credible champion of their own. Anxious English-Canadians on the outside can now indulge in the luxury of wondering whether a second federalist Quebec champion at Ottawa may not make a crowd of two.

Ryan's other impact on Trudeau will be more subtle, but more substantial. His credibility is almost as high outside Quebec as within it. Few may know him yet, but many English-Canadians have already seen him on television or heard him give one of his infinitely patient, infinitely serious disertations of what Quebec really wants.

Ryan thus can offer his constitutional proposals directly to English Canada, through and around Ottawa, in a way neither Premier Rene Levesque (who is widely liked but dismissed as a separatist) nor his predecessor ex-premier Robert Bourassa (accepted as a federalist but widely disliked) could do.

If Ryan means what he said at the convention, his proposals for constitutional change would cause Trudeau to nod and the rest of the country to yawn. Ryan has abandoned his always impractical notion of rearranging Canada into five regions. The phrase "two nations," no longer crosses his lips. Rather than "special status," for which he has argued his entire life, Ryan now proposes only "distinctive status" to be achieved by the kind of practical deals that have been hammered out since Confederation.

The causes of Ryan's apparent moderation were evident at the convention. The applause when he flashed his "We are Quebecers first" was mechanical. But the entire stadium, including some supporters of his opponent, Raymond Garneau, erupted when he added, "but we are Canadians also."

Only when victory was won did Ryan show his blue temper. "It would be a great mistake for all of Canada to believe that just because Ryan has been elected, all our problems have been solved," he said in his acceptance speech.

Indeed the real mistake would be to believe Ryan has any goal but to recreate Quebec in his own image. To begin with, he is a total Quebecer. Unlike Trudeau and Levesque, both once internationalists, Ryan has never, except once briefly in the service of the church, extended his horizons beyond Quebec.

Next is Ryan's passionate commitment to personal freedom, which has made him in turn an opponent of the authoritarianism of premier Maurice Duplessis, against the War Measures Act of Trudeau, and against the collectivist nationalism of Levesque. Though he takes it for granted that Quebec must be predominantly French, Ryan opposes the restrictions on language imposed by Bill 101.

Last, and most central of all to Ryan's thinking, is his traditionalism. A committed, militant Catholic, he toured the province through the leadership campaign with just one book, the Bible. His political convictions build upward from a belief in the sacred role of the family and in the secular importance of "volunteers" as a substitute for state action, and whom he went out of his way to praise in his convention speech.

In his physical appearance, in his mannerisms — those slow, patrician waves of the hand that are almost a benediction — and in his cast of thought, the Quebec politician Ryan most resembles is Duplessis. He is as conservative as Duplessis, as wily, as combative and as resilient an adversary but, unlike Duplessis, he is a civil libertarian. And in all these qualities, the other Quebec politician Ryan most resembles is Trudeau.

After Ryan, as editor of the daily Le Devoir, had criticized the 1970 War Measures Act, five years passed before he and Trudeau repaired their relations. Neither before, nor since, have the pair been close.

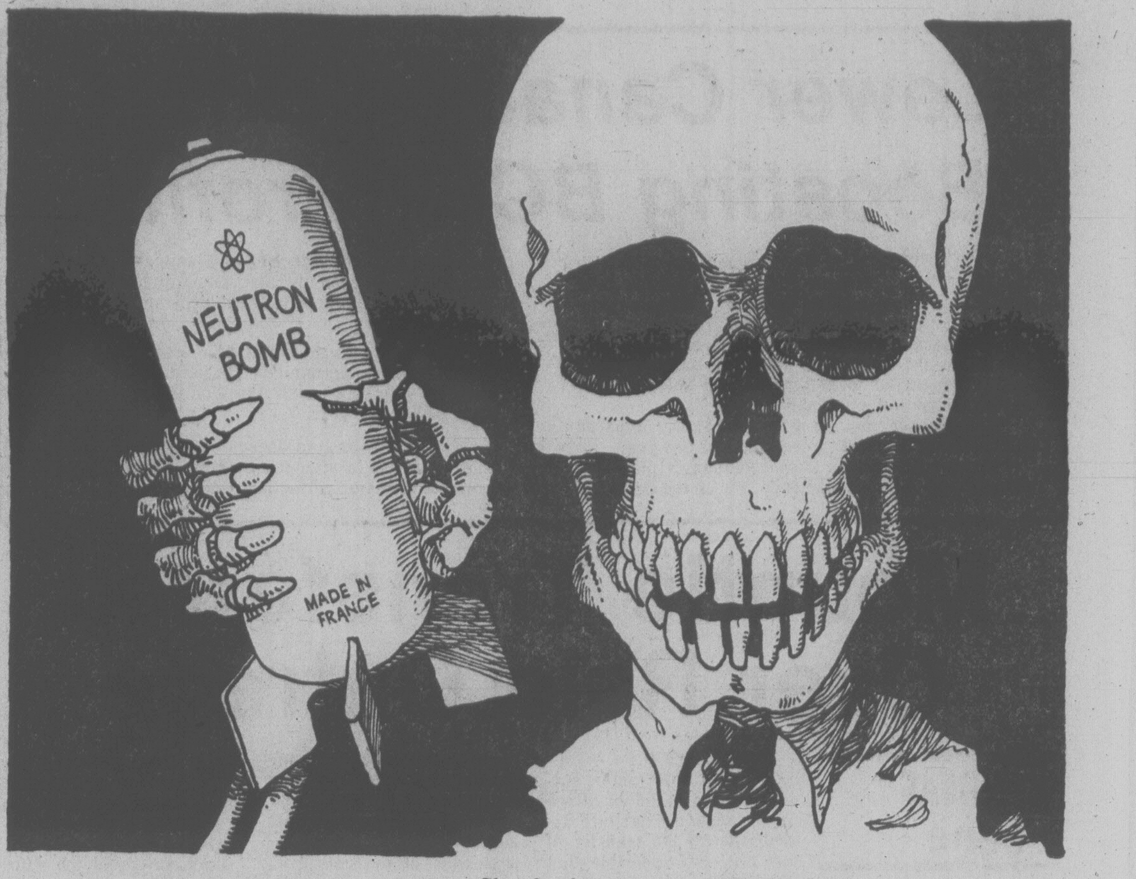
Thinned and Thickened

Today, Ryan and Trudeau are on the same side but fighting for different goals. Inevitably, therefore, they will fight each other.

All Quebec politicians have to score points off Ottawa. The force that will drive Ryan will be conviction. "The Christian politician must not dilute his belief," said Ryan in a recent interview.

In 30 years of 12-hour days and seven-day weeks as Catholic worker, as editor and as a longtime political leader-in-waiting, Ryan has never diluted his beliefs but only now and then has thinned them in order to be able to thicken them later.

The politician whose own tactics most resemble his is Trudeau. They will match each other, one carved onto rock, the other gouged out of it.



C'est la vie!

Some Comparisons

From 1972 to 1977 old age pensions and supplements increased from $150 to $240 a month, an increase of 60 per cent.

Plumbers wages increased from $7 an hour to $14 an hour, up 100 per cent.

Price of housing in Victoria went from $25,000 to $68,000, an increase of 250 per cent (according to a real estate report).

The price of lots increased from an average of $6,000 to $36,000, increase of 600 per cent.

Young couples will be exploited of approximately $50,000 to $60,000 each over the 20-year period due to exorbitant prices, especially of lots.

During the Depression days skilled workers earned up to $44 for a 44-hour week, houses that sell today for $35,000-$65,000 were purchased for $1,200-$2,000 each at five per cent interest, $7- to $12-a-month payment, just seven per cent of a tradesman's wages. Buying the same house today for $65,000 plus 10 per cent interest, payments $540 a month, is about 25 per cent of the average wage, 3½ times more than what the Depression worker paid.

It is better to earn only a dollar an hour than to have $45 an hour if the dollar has more buying power than $45. Lots for houses can be bought in parts of the British Isles for a few hundred dollars, where there are hundreds to the square mile whereas in Canada we have only eight or nine to the square mile, lots sell for up to $100,000 according to size and location.

Release the land for dwelling which the NDP froze during their term of office. It is expected that 25,000 young couples will marry in Victoria from 1974 to 1984. Will all those who buy houses be all exploited. One quick way to bring down the price of houses is for all young married couples to stop buying them for three to six months.

Yours for an honest deal for all young couples. — Robert J. Hutchinson, 2-1060 Southgate Street.

Farewell to Gati

This month sees us saying goodbye to our fine music director, Laszlo Gati, who has done so much to improve the culture here. He and his nice family are going to be greatly missed by those of us who would like to see him stay, even the tourists are going to miss him, and the outdoor concerts. There were nice letters written to our papers after visitors had returned home, and they were commenting on our being so lucky in having these concerts with Mr. Gati.

I only wish I had heard of the intended resignation sooner in order to get together those who wished he would stay, so that we could have asked him to reconsider.

Unfortunately, due to too many small and closed minds about progress, plus professional jealousy, Victoria is guilty of bad manners toward an invited visitor. We are forever trying to impress by using the word "olde" but our manners are not in keeping with the era of that word.

When will the above mentioned people stop trying to hold Victoria back and realize she is no longer in diapers but a big girl now? — E. M. Morgan, 1147 Quadra Street.

Not Just for Few

It would appear the Times correspondent W. C. Hubbard (Royal Oak Mess, April 13) is miffed because he is looking into his cupboard but finds it empty of speculative dollars. This, or he misses the point.

It is not a black or white matter of development or non-development per se. It is a matter of appropriate, sensitive planning as being complementary to technical planning. Selective, piecemeal planning in isolation to the benefit of some at the expense of others is unacceptable to the valley residents as a whole.

The crux of the issue is the adjacent and surrounding homeowners who suffer the effects of encroachment and the deteriorations of light industrial development as a legacy after the owners are long gone with pockets full of self-satisfaction.

The speculators, developers and users of the industrial sites equally have no thought or conscience as they, too, could not care less about the troubles and trauma caused for the environs.

The only way now open if development of the valley is to be imposed is to respect the residential tenor of the area and call a halt, or proceed with total concept planning from Kay Street to the Royal Oak Inn, from Wilkinson to Broadmead-Quadra within the prescribed urban containment boundary. This will produce sewers, put congestion and traffic patterns into perspective in an appropriate environment and appreciate property values for all owners instead of just for a few. Owners can then elect to remain or move in a climate of resolved planning but benefit from a uniform, equitable market. — Fred Kirkman, 521 Normandy Road.

Tolmie School

I am an angry parent whose daughter goes to Tolmie school. Six of the nine school board trustees succeeded in closing our school as of this June, and I want people to know who they are so they can be sure not to vote for them in the future. Their names are Susan Brice (chairman), Bud Smith, Peter Yorke, Mark Fisher, Peter Dorazio and Glyn Williams.

None of them deserves to be on our school board, since money means more to them than our children's education. Certainly there has to be a balance between good education and the cost of it, but Tolmie school is a relatively cheap one to run. Also, there is something like $98,000 owing on the school which is paid off at the rate of $10,000 a year. When the school is closed we will still be paying that $10,000 a year for nothing!

Unless there is some motive other than that of saving money, such as some industry wanting to buy that prime property for a good price, why are these six so against keeping our school open?

We have got to keep people like them out of power! — Mrs. Mary A. McFadden, 841 Swan Street.

Marijuana Driving

I write to take issue with L. D. Dunn's letter Impaired on Grass? (April 13) on Mr. Brenton's conviction for impaired driving.

First, she fails to ask herself what kind of driving performance resulted in Brenton being pulled over and tested for impairment. Second, quoting the LeDain report to chastise anyone (except, perhaps, the LeDain commission) is a sure sign of limited reading in the drug research field. Simply, it is biased and outdated. Recent major, reputable studies conclude that impairment by marijuana is a significant factor in traffic accidents.

One can reach the same conclusion without resort to such reports. As she correctly puts it, pot is a psychedelic. By definition it alters perceptions of time, motion, space and color as well as reaction time and judgment.

As a driver's competence at the wheel is a function of sensory perceptions, reaction time and judgment, he cannot drive as well if those faculties are impaired.

Perhaps a psychedelic experience at home may not be considered dangerous, but such an experience in a ton of moving steel obeying the unforgiving laws of physics along with other tons of moving steel is another thing altogether. — W. D. John, Mill Hill Road.

Thanks to Forbes

A few words of appreciation for the coverage in your recent issue of the interview given me by Elizabeth Forbes (Bert McNeill Moved In When Coal Went Out' Times, April 8).

The response from friends was plentiful, and all praised the portrayal and Bill Halkett's photo.

We had hardly read the Times ourselves when a phone call came from Brentwood from a former schoolmate whom I have not seen for many years. A lady wrote from Duncan, whose father was E & N Railway station agent there in the Dunsmuir days.

We thought that Elizabeth put the story together very nicely; and your ample display was a pleasant surprise. — Bert McNeill, 1141 Hampshire Road.

Wrong Way Doors

From reading the leading editorial in the Times of April 15 (A Good Idea), I gather that you are concerned with the "shockingly high incidence of deaths and damage due to fires" in this city. In your list of precautions I have missed one that has bothered me for some time, namely, the great number of doors in public buildings such as small stores, that open inwardly.

One has only to imagine what would happen were someone to call "fire" in a crowded shop. The rush for the door and the frantic pile-up would prevent the inward moving door from opening.

I would suggest a bylaw requiring all such doors be changed to open outward or on a swinging hinge. — L. Powell, 601-831 Dunsmuir Road.

Bawlf's Reply

In reply to the letter of Joyce Heynsbroek, R.N., (Not Free) published on April 4:

I find her charge of "gross misinformation" in my MLA's report to Victoria constituents somewhat extreme.

While there is indeed a financial assessment that can result in a fee being charged for homemaker service, it occurs rarely. Between 95 and 98 per cent of people qualifying for the homemaker service do not pay any daily fee.

Let me give two examples:

☐ One person living at home with an income of $296 a month or less, pays nothing.

☐ A couple living at home and receiving the service with an income of $550 or less pays nothing.

Home care nursing connected with a discharge from hospital is provided free of charge.

What Ms. Heynsbroek did not mention in her letter was a statement from health Minister Robert McClelland in his ministry's publication, Long Term Care:

"Home support services are not intended to relieve persons and families of any functions which they can and should provide for themselves, or the member of their family who is entitled to benefits under the program."

In another instance Mr. McClelland has said:

"No person will be denied care because of financial restraints. Those eligible residents who are unable to pay their portion of the cost may apply to the ministry of human resources for assistance." — Sam Bawlf, Minister of Recreation and Conservation.

Scotland on the Brink of Turmoil?

By CONOR CRUISE O'BRIEN

(A former politician and diplomat, O'Brien is now editor-in-chief of the London Observer.)

"It may, of course, be chaotic, but then internal chaos may be the best answer to external disorder." That remark was made at a luncheon in Edinburgh the other day. The speaker, a distinguished Scotsman, was talking about the shape that an independent Scottish state might take.

The remark struck a sinister note. I had heard something like it before in a dining room at the United Nations in New York and it had been followed by a violent and premeditated murder. The month was September, 1960, the speaker was a pro-Western North African diplomat and what he said was:

"Le chaos a sa logique."

Unlike the Scot, my Tunisian acquaintance had no hesitation in clarifying his meaning: The Congo was in chaos. The prime minister of the Congo, Patrice Lumumba, was at the centre of the chaos. The logic of chaos pointed to the physical elimination — which would be called murder in terms of non-chaotic logics — of Patrice Lumumba.

That logic was carried to that precise conclusion four months later, when Mr. Lumumba was carried as a captive to Elisabethville, Katanga, and there put to death.

"Le chaos a sa logique," and there are those who understand that logic, and act on it. There are also those who do not understand it, and get acted on.

Scotland is not the Congo and I am far from attributing homicidal intent to my lucid, calm, and philosophical guest at Edinburgh. But I did think that what he was saying pointed in a similar general direction to "chaos has its logic."

He was clearly not any kind of anarchist; his approbation of chaos could only be coldly provisional: That is, the logic of chaos — whatever forms of Scottish chaos he had in mind — could be followed through dialectically to the restoration, out of it, of a significantly stronger political authority than exists in the British liberal and democratic state.

In short, the experiment of Scottish independence could lead, through high initial and medial turbulence, to a right-wing victory, and a rational regime conducted by the traditional and competent Scottish elites.

That same evening, I attended a social gathering at which almost all the guests were Scottish nationalists, mostly of the moderate Left, and of academic proclivities. Although I am myself something of a burnt-out case where nationalism is concerned, I found the company congenial.

These are people who know a lot, and care a lot, about Scotland, as well as about other matters. Their discourse was serious, measured, informative. The repellent characteristics of nationalism — including that musty, acrid amalgam of xenophobia and self-pity — were not in evidence.

There was an element of mild Utopianism, an unacknowledged and carefully controlled undercurrent of romanticism. But these are, on the whole, within such limits, good things.

But Scots also share with other humans some less attractive qualities and passions. The history of Scotland as an independent state gives little encouragement to the notion that Scottish genes are in themselves a guarantee of justice, mercy, stability or peace.

An independent Scotland would be subject to intense stresses, because of the exceptional unevenness of the distribution of its population and resources. Oil discoveries tend to increase these stresses rather than diminish them.

The union with Britain partly conceals this reality. Citizens of oil-less Glasgow can readily agree with citizens of oil-rich Aberdeen that Britain gets too much of the benefits of "Scotland's oil."

But if an independent Scottish Parliament had to allocate these benefits, to decide who got what, and what got taken from whom, then citizens of the oil-rich areas would not be likely to acquiesce so easily in the face of the decisions of Parliamentary majorities based on the oil-less and otherwise deprived areas.

Other regions of Scotland may have little or no objection to the subsidization of the populous depressed Strathclyde region by the taxpayers of the United Kingdom. Would they feel the same if they had to bear the full burden of the subsidies themselves?

It seems likely that social antagonisms would rise sharply, together with regional antagonisms, and often in combination with these. Under such conditions, a revolutionary mood could establish itself in the poorer areas, a counter-revolutionary-secessionist mood in the richer areas. The secession of Shetland and Orkney could provide precedent and spark — as Katanga did.

Independence could lead to right-wing win by elite

Tom Nairn, the British sociologist, recently wrote an interesting, well-informed and sometimes persuasive book, entitled The Break-up of Britain.

Alternatively — but no less unpleasantly — that break-up might be forcibly prevented: If the elected parliament, because of the sharpness of its internal differences, proved unable to maintain order, the security forces of the new state might undertake that task on their own responsibility, resulting in authoritarian rule, probably of the right.

These fearsome perspectives may seem implausible enough in the peace of March, 1978. But then the idea of Scottish independence — as distinct from devolution or home rule — itself still seems implausible. Polls have consistently shown about 20 per cent of Scottish voters favoring independence.

On a different but related question — the state of the parties — the survey results just published by the Glasgow Herald — Labor 35 per cent, Tories 30 per cent, Scottish Nationalist Party 27 per cent — do not suggest a Scotland swinging in the direction of independence.

Some well-informed people believe that the advent of an assembly with devolved powers — for which the polls suggest a majority exists — would lead to a growth in support for independence, and eventually, to independence itself. As it happens, this view was put to me rather tentatively by nationalists in Edinburgh, and much more forcibly by unionists in Aberdeen.

No doubt there is likely to be at least a degree of disappointment with the assembly (if there is an assembly), and no doubt nationalists will be quick to point the moral that what is needed is a sovereign parliament.

It does not follow that the nationalists will be able to get the needed extra 30 per cent or so of the people to accept that this is so. If there is dissatisfaction with the assembly — and especially with dissensions in the assembly — it seems likely that at least some of the people would react against both the reality of the assembly and the conception of a sovereign Scottish Parliament.

The contemplation of the working of an assembly might produce some drift towards independence offset by some drift away from it. It is hard to see it, by itself, bringing about the required decisive swing towards independence.

With more force it can be argued that drastic deterioration in Britain's economy could stimulate increased support for full Scottish independence. It could indeed and it is a fair point that under such conditions devolution could provide the path to independence.

My own hope is that the Scottish people will support devolution in the coming referendum, and will elect their assembly: that they will then use that assembly as a high place from which to contemplate the potential abysses of a sovereign and independent Scottish state, and hold back from that brink.

If You Want Spending Give Money to Poor

LEONARD SHIFRIN

OTTAWA — A federal budget is the major income distribution event of the year.

In recent years, finance ministers have redistributed an average of about $2 billion with each year's budget.

By contrast, the tripling of family allowances, five years ago, was the last time a welfare minister redistributed anything even close to a billion dollars.

The manner in which our succession of recent finance ministers have chosen to spread their largesse, unfortunately, has left a good deal to be desired.

* * *

Characteristically, cuts have either been in the form of across-the-board percentage reductions, which give biggest benefits to those in top tax brackets, or special deductions — such as the first $1,000 of interest and dividend income — which only those with top incomes are likely to be able to claim.

Last year's tax cuts were a step in a more even-handed direction.

They amounted to a flat $200 for an average-size family, with only the lowest-income and highest-income families being excluded from the distribution.

The top 20 per cent were left out because the cuts took the form of an increase in the tax-reduction credit, whose $500 maximum they were already claiming.

The bottom 20 per cent were excluded because they were below the income tax threshold.

This year's $1.1 billion sales tax cut, from an equity standpoint, is in some ways better and in others worse than last year's measures.

Its benefits will increase with income, so those at the top of the ladder will gain most. But they will also extend below the income tax threshold, so even the poorest of Canadians will receive a share.

Two factors determine how much a family will save from the sales tax cuts.

The first, of course, is how much income it has to spend.

The second is how much of that income is spent on things that are subject to sales tax.

Food, for example, isn't; nor is rent. And both of these items represent a disproportionate share of the budgets of the poor.

On the other hand, a variety of ways in which money is characteristically disposed of by the non-poor — from golf club memberships and foreign travel to investments and savings — aren't subject to the tax either.

The end result, according to a study carried out for the Economic Council of Canada several years ago, is that a slightly larger proportion of the incomes of the poor than of the rich winds up in provincial government coffers by way of the sales tax.

In dollar terms, though, the study found that an average family in the lowest income 20 per cent of the population paid about $125 in provincial sales tax in 1969, compared to about $500 for the highest income group.

* * *

Since that time, the combination of price inflation and higher sales tax rates has roughly doubled those figures.

Thus, the benefits of the half-year, three per cent sales tax cuts (or, in some provinces, three-quarter year, two per cent cuts) will apparently range from about $50, on average, for the lowest-income group, to $200 for the highest.

That's $50 better for the folks at the bottom than any previous year's tax cut but, rising with income, it's not exactly equity.

The reason Ottawa chose sales tax reductions, which required awkward reimbursement arrangements with the provinces, rather than more income tax cuts, was accumulating evidence that the income tax savings were simply being banked, rather than spent.

The sales tax cuts seem more likely to stimulate a rise in consumer spending, but it's far from a sure thing.

It may be that all those admonitions about our need to become a conserver society have been taken to heart, and "three per cent off" won't entice consumers into trading in their whatevers on this year's newer model.

* * *

If so, and Canadians decide to buy no more than what they had originally intended, then the sales tax reductions too will wind up gathering interest in their bank accounts.

In 1975, when the United States adopted a program of tax rebates to stimulate a recession-gripped economy, it found that only half the rebated money got spent. More significant, though hardly surprising, was its findings that the lower a recipient's income, the higher the proportion of the rebate that was spent.

That, no doubt, came as a revelation to the economists and politicians, but it certainly shouldn't have been all that hard to figure out.

If you want to be sure that money gets spent, give it to someone who hasn't got any.

It's a lesson that Canadian policy-makers have evidently had difficulty absorbing. But perhaps the current experiment with giving the poor a small portion of the distribution may embolden our leaders to push the concept further in years to come.

Who knows, in time we may reach the point of giving those at the bottom of the income ladder the same spending bonuses as those at the top.

Maybe even a little more.

Trimmed to the Essentials

katharine whitehorn

The long golden curls of Little Lord Fauntleroy have symbolized for nearly a century the sort of indulgence that makes a Mama (in this case known as Dearest) treat her little darling man-child as a toy. Personally I don't believe it. I think Dearest simply couldn't face the agony of chopping the ringlets off, since anaesthetics may have been invented but weren't then, any more than they are now, in general use around the home.

Books on the subject recommend that you start out by taking a child with you to the hairdressers, long before he has to be cut himself; and then slide him nonchalantly into the fatal chair alongside. Little Delilahs, I'm told, don't have this infant Samson complex; but having only sons, I wouldn't know.

The first time my son was trimmed he sat in sullen silence because he didn't know what was happening to him; the second time it took two assistants to hold him down and the third time I found they'd put the price up to five times what it had been before.

Hairdressers usually have some excuse for such rises, like the shampoos are now to be made out of mare's milk or the blow-dry will also play rock music; this time they candidly admitted that wasn't the reason. They just couldn't stand it any longer, and hoped the price might be a deterrent.

It was; so we next tried a pair of local Italians. They were not too bad at inveigling the growing lad into the chair, and I learned some very curious things from the men's magazines they have lying about in such places; only trouble was, the haircuts themselves were frightful. I couldn't understand how any Italians could cut hair so badly — until I found out they were actually Cypriots. And that was the point where I started to do it myself.

I tried doing it in the bath (him, I mean, not me); I did it in front of the TV, and nearly cut his ear off each time he laughed; we tried blow-drying the hair off his shoulders on to the carpet and had the Hoover out of action for a fortnight. But nothing made the slightest difference to his post-haircut depression.

So we have now gone through the following styles, which can be seen walking along any street:

1. The Half-Nelson. This is a highly lopsided affair caused by the row being so frightful that the cutting mother gives up halfway through.

2. The Prison Trim. This is what you could call a haircut of despair: The child's not going to like it, he's not going to look nice; but at least if you practically shave him to the scalp it'll be a long time before it has to happen again.

3. The Sheep-dog Special. This is what happens when you get your own way at the back, which the boy can't see, but are prevented from doing anything at all to the front, which he can. The effect is as of a child wearing a thick wig which someone has unkindly tipped forward over his eyes.

4. The Yak. As above, except that the child not only can't see out of the front, he couldn't find the back of his neck to wash it even if he wanted to. This follows the inevitable final scene where the mother says she will never touch it again, ever, so long as she lives, and if the teachers won't let him in the classroom they can darned well cut it themselves.

After the discovery of this last-named style, my son groped his way about the house for a few weeks and was led to school in the morning by his companions. But when the swimming season started he cut most of it off himself; because surfacing like a sea-weed-covered rock in the swimming pool apparently left him with a mouthful of hair and no idea in which direction to swim.

And the beautiful thing that has now happened is that he strides off to the barber by himself; and I realize that while I've had my head down over the basin the whole scene has changed. In the sixties it was the hairies, the hippies and the middleclass intellectuals' kids who had a lot of hair, while working-class boys were still being booted off for a short back and sides by their stern fathers.

Now it's the other way round, and the young and trendy at least like their collar cleared. The only stragglers (I'm picking my words) are the aging lefties who think it would be a betrayal of all they hold sacred to shorten a single greasy strand, and the rougher stuff in the school playground who don't realize that scissors can be used for other things besides sticking them into your enemies.

Alas, many a mother has prayed daily that a time would come when her son would see the light, and get his own hair cut beautifully short, and she could be proud of him. And the day has come; and the hair is short; only he's a punk rocker with a safety-pin through his cheek and the hair is pale green. This hasn't, I'm thankful to say, happened to us — yet. But he has suddenly conceived the desire to be cut by me again; and I have given in. But at a price; only if he'd let me write this article.

Need for Audits Stressed In Accountancy Report

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — A report by the Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants recommends that all public or private companies with significant social or economic impact should publish annual, audited, financial statements.

The report, released Thursday, was prepared by a committee established a year ago to study the apparent gap in the public's expectations of auditors's responsibilities and what auditors actually are doing.

The committee suggested that small enterprises not accountable to the public in social or economic areas should be permitted to waive the current statutory audit.

However, all other corporations and organizations should be required to make their annual, audited, financial statements available to the public. The requirement would affect subsidiaries of foreign firms, unions, hospitals and anyone operating under a government franchise.

The committee, led by John W. Adams of London, vice-president of the institute, also said auditors are increasingly viewed as agents of social control and third-party intermediaries between company management and its clients.

However, auditors cannot guarantee that an enterprise is free from fraud, it said, adding that "the auditing process may be circumvented by elaborate schemes or dishonest management."

The report said auditors have no definition of their responsibility relating to illegal acts by clients. It suggested all enterprises with public accountability be required to establish a code of corporate conduct.

"This would allow shareholders and customers to know the company's standards in advance and would provide a framework for auditors to meet an expanded public responsibility in such matters."

Northerners Vow to Return if Bennett Delays

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

The folk from Fort Nelson were temporarily mollified following meetings with Premier Bill Bennett Thursday over the future of the B.C. Rail line to their community.

But if Bennett delays a decision for more than a week or two, they'll be back and won't be put off so easily, says Fort Nelson mayor Andy Schuck.

Bennett held two meetings — with the mayors of a dozen northern communities and with a 100-strong representation of the citizens of Fort Nelson — over the interim report of a royal commission which recommended closure of the 400-km line to Fort Nelson.

The premier told both groups he is emotionally and spiritually behind them but will not make a decision on the line until he has more information.

Following the meeting, the mayors issued a statement saying Bennett left them with the belief he won't close the line.

And they said they are hopeful he will make an announcement to that effect when he goes to Fort Nelson next week.

Schuck, although he went along with the majority, and in fact read the statement to the press, was nevertheless unhappy.

"I feel the premier's answer to our request for an immediate decision is, quite frankly, a cop-out."

Schuck said the premier won't even give the time frame within which he is operating.

He said the government already has had 3½ months to study the interim report.

"The invasion of Normandy was planned in less time than that."

While Bennett was meeting with the two groups, demonstrators stood outside the windows of his office waving placards and chanting: "We want Bennett."

Schuck said his people are leaving disappointed.

"He (Bennett) didn't even come out and address them after they travelled 1,100 miles."

Bennett told the delegates he can't get emotional about an issue that needs a rational decision.

He told them their best guarantee is that the government will make a rational decision and aded he is developing a subsidy formula for all areas of transportation.

The recommendation made in the royal commission's interim report would have serious consequences if acted on and the government has not accepted that recommendation, he said.

There are a number of areas that need more examination and so the government is studying not only the conclusion of the report, but also the evidence leading to the conclusion.

The government can't make a statement before then, Bennett said.

The mayors told the premier the north contributes to the benefit of the entire province and to look at the rail line in that light.

If the government pulls out, it will show the premier has lost confidence in the northeast sector of the province, they said, and again mentioned the belief by some that the area should leave B.C. to become part of Alberta.

In the legislature, former finance minister Dave Stupich (NDP — Nanaimo) failed to find out from Finance Minister Evan Wolfe what the impact on the provincial treasury would be if the Fort Nelson extension is terminated.

Stupich also wanted to know how much money the government would lose in taxes and royalties from the three sawmills, two veneer plants and related forest operations as a result of the closure of the line.

A question by Rosemary Brown (NDP — Vancouver-Burrard) to Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm, on the social consequences which would result from the closure, was ruled out of order.

Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt told Barbara Wallace (NDP — Cowichan-Malahat) that he had not given assurances to a farm delegation Wednesday that the link would remain open.

Mrs. Wallace said that a brief by the delegation stated abandonment of the Fort Nelson extension would affect the farming of 130,000 acres in the Buick Creek area near Fort Nelson and end possible development of another 500,000 acres.

Conservative leader Vic Stephens asked Premier Bennett if the government is in the process of selling, leasing or disposing of any part of the BCR.

Bennett said it is not.

He said that an internal study is under way to provide the government with detailed information to back up whatever decision it makes.

'Campbell Screamed At Me for 20 Minutes'

Oak Bay alderman Shirley Dowell let go with both barrels at Thursday's meeting of her regional grants committee, condemning Jim Campbell, chairman of the Capital Regional District's board for his attempt to shift responsibility for a proposed civic centre from her to Victoria alderman Murray Glazier.

She said Campbell phoned her, demanded she give up the project and "yelled and screamed at me for 20 minutes.

"He said he would fight me on this with every weapon he had and would discredit me by disbanding my grants committee.

"The only way he said I would have my committee meeting today was if I agreed to recommend a resolution that he would draft."

On Tuesday, Campbell had executive director Dennis Young notify committee members that Thursday's meeting was postponed but Dowell contacted the members by phone and reactivated the meeting.

Asked by Dowell, Young said Campbell, as chairman, has the power to appoint and disband committees, set terms of reference for committees and change them.

Dowell said she had worked hard on the centre project and succeeded in getting the co-operation of Recreation Minister Sam Bawlf and city alderman Ron McKenzie, who is chairman of the city's cultural arts committee. (Both the city and the provincial government own property on the proposed site adjacent to the Crystal Garden.)

Esquimalt mayor Art Young said he was distressed that there should be a personality clash between Dowell and Campbell on such an important issue.

He said it was well within Campbell's perogative to decide the centre project should be either jointly handled by Glazier's regional planning committee and Dowell's or transferred to Glazier's at this time.

It was decided to debate the issue at the next meeting of the regional board.

Campbell was out-of-town Thursday but in a letter to committee members he explained: "I believe that the main initiative in exploring the feasibility of this proposal is as an economic development matter, and that the aspect of it which relates to the grants' committee's terms of reference will follow in the terms of the capability which the facility might have for agencies receiving grants, rather than in the actual provision of the proposed facility."

Buffet Service On Ferries

The B.C. Ferry Corp. will provide a buffet service on its vessels on the Swartz Bay-Tsawwassen route starting June 19, traffic manager Ken Stratford said Thursday.

Stratford said in a news release the service will be available until Sept. 11. He said a month-long experiment in providing buffet service in addition to cafeteria service showed that the extra service could break even only during times of "very heavy traffic such as the Easter vacation period."

Before The Judge

A 17-year-old Sidney youth collected a total of $150 in fines along with a suspended sentence plus six-months probation in provincial court Wednesday for what Judge Blake Allan termed "a pretty disgraceful performance".

Stephen Lupkoski, 844 Towner Park, pleaded guilty to charges of causing a disturbance by shouting, resisting a peace officer and wilful damage to government property stemming from an April 8 incident beginning in a Sidney pizza parlor and ending in the Sidney RCMP detachment cells.

Judge Allan also ordered Lupkoski to make "a proper and contrite apology" to the two arresting officers as well as paying $40 for damages to the cell. He refused an attempt by Lupkoski to be reimbursed for his clothing which he said was torn by police after he was placed in the cell.

The court was told that Lupkoski was intoxicated at the time of the incidents although he denied it but admitted to having done some drinking at the beach.

The lawyer for a man charged with the theft of a bottle of perfume told the court the crime was senseless.

He said that Jerry Thomas, 34, of no fixed address, had no "use for a bottle of perfume himself."

Thomas, arrested in North Vancouver on a bench warrant, had already spent two nights in jail awaiting his Victoria court appearance and was given one day more after he pleaded guilty.

* * *

A 69-year-old Duncan man just didn't look the part, Judge Allan said after hearing how he had to be handcuffed.

The court was told Herbert Ryan tried to kick a police officer after being taken to the Sidney detachment from the Victoria International Airport parking lot April 1.

The court was told the RCMP made the arrest after complaints from three citizens. A breathalyser test showed Ryan's blood-alcohol level to be .32.

Ryan pleaded guilty to impaired driving and was fined $500, placed on six months probation and ordered to take the impaired drivers course.

Ryan said he had been driving for more than 40 years.

"I have never had so much as a parking ticket," he said.

"Maybe it's because you never got caught," Allan retorted.

Other drinking-driving offences:

Andreas Nauman, 30, of 780 Mckenzie, fined $300, six months probation, ordered to attend the impaired drivers course; George J. Janak, 39, of 5417 West Saanich, fined $450.

Judge Lenient On First Adult Offence

A 19-year-old Victoria youth, who pleaded guilty April 12 to possession of 15 ounces of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking, was given a suspended sentence in county court Thursday and placed on probation for 18 months.

Judge E.J.C. Stewart noted that it was the first adult offence for David Ian Boyd, also known as Daniel Ian Benson, and he considered it an exceptional case to the general rule that such an offence should be punished with a jail sentence.

At one point in his comments, Stewart said it is a great mistake to be overly lenient because that could lead to an appeal . . . "so I hope I am not in this case following any wrong principles in disposing of it the way I do."

He said Boyd had a sad background, which he very likely had brought on himself, and a lot of misfortune in family affairs. The absence of appropriate treatment when he was a juvenile was some explanation why he was before the court now.

"I am not naive enough to think this was an isolated offence. I think it is highly unlikely you were caught the first time," he said.

Stewart said when he first became a judge 10 years ago, the Court of Appeal was considering jail sentences for simple possession of a joint of marijuana. The situation was different today "as it should be."

He noted that the probation officer recommended the court consider a jail sentence for Boyd because he didn't appear remorseful and lacked motivation to change his lifestyle.

Stewart said this was his first adult offence, that Boyd had had his share of misfortune, had no family support and a terrible work record.

"So far you've been a completely useless citizen. But I have yet to find that is a reason to put a person in jail, or the lack of remorse in this case," he said.

Crown counsel Malcolm Macaulay said Boyd was using lockers at the bus depot to store marijuana. Police went there, found 15 one-ounce baggies, waited, then arrested Boyd when he showed up.

Bus Study Ordered By Curtis

The provincial government has established a special committee to examine ways to save money through greater co-operation between Pacific Stage Lines and Vancouver Island Coach Lines.

Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis said Thursday in a news release that a joint ministry-B.C. Hydro committee will be asked to identify those non-essential services offered by the companies which are being subsidized by the general taxpayer.

Delegation To Fight Spraying

COURTENAY (CP) — The Black Creek community action committee said Thursday it will send a delegation to Victoria to protest B.C. Hydro spraying of power line right-of-ways with 2,4-D.

The committee said the chemical was unsafe and that no spraying at all should be taking place in the Black Creek area.

Black Creek is a community about 25 kilometres north of here.

B.C. Hydro said it wants to continue using the Phenoxy herbicide to eliminate broadleaf herbaceous plants along powerlines between Black Creek and Campbell River, and Gold River and Tahsis.

B.C. Hydro spokesman Ian Pate said permits have been granted for spraying between May 1 and October.

Pate said spraying on Vancouver Island had been taking place for 25 years.

The Black Creek committee said the group will investigate the possibility of withholding payment of B.C. Hydro charges.

The group said it will try to get Premier Bill Bennett to revoke Hydro permits for spraying and authorize safe non-chemical methods of plant control.

MINERALS SOAK UP SIGNALS

Navigational Gaps to be Filled

Large gaps in the electronic navigation system protecting West Coast shipping and environment may be filled by early 1980, a Canadian Coast Guard spokesman said Thursday.

T.J. Kew of Vancouver, regional manager of aids to navigation and waterways, made the statement in an interview following remarks made about the Loran C North Pacific coast system during the 17th annual Canadian Hydrographic Conference here.

Kew confirmed that the system, designed to let ships fix their position anywhere up the coast from Puget Sound to the Gulf of Alaska, is virtually useless in the Gulf of Georgia through Johnstone Strait to the northern Queen Charlottes.

He said the Loran signals are effective some distance at sea west of a north-south line through Cape Beale on the west coast of Vancouver Island, and north of Dixon Entrance.

Solving the problem means spending about $2 million to erect a third radio repeating station somewhere on northern Vancouver Island to make it possible for merchant ships and fishing vessels to use the Loran positioning system anywhere in B.C. coastal waters.

Location, cost and allocation of Canada-U.S. responsibility are under discussion or are subject to negotiation, Kew said.

The U.S., with a major interest in shipping because of anticipated tanker traffic from Alaska, worked with Canada in setting up the existing Loran C system which functions through a master radio transmitter at Williams Lake, a slave transmitter at Shoal Cove, in the Alaska Panhandle, and a second slave inland in northern Washington.

It is designed to complement a Loran C system covering the American coast south to Mexico.

At the hydrographic conference dominion hydrographer Gerry Ewing, of Ottawa, referred to problems with the Loran C net, and Mike Eaton, head of navigation group for the Canadian Hydrographic Service Atlantic region, said in an interview at the conference "people had a pretty rude surprise when Loran C signals were not received in Strait of Juan de Fuca."

He said it had not been realized when the system was designed what effect the mountainous terrain would have on signals. The U.S. Coast Guard determined layout and Canada accepted the design.

Eaton said the difficulty seems to be that the Washington transmitter's signals get out of phase in Dixon Entrance, and the Panhandle signals are blanked out in the south. The signals are designed to overlap in the form of a grid on which a receiver's position can be fixed.

There could be a two or three-mile variation in Dixon Entrance, compared with a potential accuracy of a quarter-mile in a properly operating system. The seaward range is about 2,000 kilometres, Kew said.

After decisions are made on location and cost it will take 13 months for new transmitting equipment to be made and delivered, he added. Several sites are being considered in the Port Hardy area.

The Problem:
The Honda Motor Company Limited has determined that a defect which relates to safety may exist in the fuel filler cap release mechanism of certain Honda motorcycles. It may be possible during a collision for the rider to impact the hinged fuel filler cap in such a manner as to actuate the release lever resulting in the opening of the cap. If the cap opens gasoline will escape creating a fire hazard.

The Solution:
Canadian Honda Motor Limited strongly urges the owners of the Honda motorcycles listed below to contact their nearest Honda Motorcyle dealer for an appointment to have this defect remedied. He will replace the release mechanism with a key-type locking device. This service will be performed completely free of charge.

PRIVACY LACKING

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — A new $3 million health unit here could become a white elephant because its design does not allow for patient confidentiality, Dr. Andrew Ross, northern interior medical health officer, said Wednesday.

Ross said the British Columbia Building Corp., which began overseeing all government buildings April 1, has decided that provincial facilities will have a number of open areas.

The open concept would affect public health nurses, health inspectors and physiotherapists.

"They will have clients coming to see them talking about personal things: home problems, sex problems, mental problems," Ross said. "We feel this is somewhat confidential."

John Pitcher, president of the building corporation, confirmed that the move to open spaces is an economic one but said there is no loss of confidentiality.

Pitcher said officials in Nanaimo, Vernon, Terrace and Kamloops were unhappy with the open area concept, but the corporation is flexible enough that if offices are needed, they will be built.

Expropriation Plan Angers Indians

PENTICTON (CP) — The chief of the Penticton Indian band said Thursday he is disturbed by reports that the provincial government will begin expropriation procedures if the band does not begin negotiations on right-of-way for a four-lane highway.

Chief Morris Kruger said in an interview at the convention of the Union of British Columbia Indian Chiefs that he is angry about the way a highway department spokesman worded a demand made Wednesday.

"That's a very heavy attitude to take," said Kruger. "expropriation is a bad word and causes trouble with people.

"What they're doing is a sort of blackmail. They're holding an axe over our heads."

The land in question, about 100 acres on flood plains along the river channel joining Okanagan and Skaha lakes, is to be used for part of a parkway announced by Premier Bill Bennett in 1976.

The federal government acquired the land for flood control in 1940, and the band argues that flood control, not the building of highways, is the only use to which they have agreed.

Kruger also said the band has never surrendered the land, a position he says is supported by the provincial government request that negotiations begin.

In its general session Thursday, the union rejected a move to close its meetings to government officials and members of the non-Indian press. The motion was easily defeated in a show of hands.

Several delegates argued that closed meetings, held during UBCIC conventions and assemblies in the past, are necessary so Indians could openly discuss strategies to bring about separate government and a settlement of land claims questions.

The motion to exclude government officials and the press was made by a representative of the Nimkish tribe.

"I think the press should be removed because they don't know the historical background of the cause, of what we are discussing," she said.

CUPE members in 10 Okanagan communities were locked out Wednesday after negotiations broke down with the Okanagan Mainline Municipal Labor Relations Association, the bargaining agent for Okanagan communities.

During the afternoon session, delegates voted in favor of the UBCIC executive's position paper on separate Indian government.

Bob Manuel, who developed the paper, said the approval shows support for the demand that land and power, not money, be the basis for any land claims settlement.

"What we're doing now will be to put together further workshops, refine the document and then go to villages and begin to implement," he said.

He said Indians would begin by exercising authority over matters they feel they can manage better than whites such as fishing and conservation.

He said that when Indians show they can manage their affairs, the federal and provincial governments will be willing to recognize their authority.

"If there's this law and that law, and your people made that law and you can live with it, which law are you going to obey," he said.

Vancouver Pimping On Rise

VANCOUVER (CP) — There has been a considerable increase in the number of pimps in the city since police stopped laying new soliciting charges and dropped 280 outstanding charges in early March, Ins. Bill Nicol said Thursday.

Nicol, head of the 16-member vice squad, said two court decisions this year dismissing soliciting charges—one against a woman alleged to have solicited an undercover policeman and another against a man alleged to have solicited an undercover policewoman—have meant street prostitution in the city is a free market.

Attempts to control the number of prostitutes by issuing tickets under an old city bylaw covering the scaring of horses and the disruption of traffic has also been discontinued and the charges dropped, said Nicol.

In addition to monitoring activities, Nicol said the vice squad now is concentrating on laying charges under sections of the Criminal Code that deal with prostitution-related offences such as keeping a common bawdy house and living off the avails of prostitution.

Protesters Stage 'Spill'

SEATTLE (AP) — A "catastrophic oil spill" fouled the shores of the Seattle Federal Building plaza Thursday when the good ship SST Dispoiler struck a rock and ran aground.

The Greenpeace Foundation staged the mock spill outside the building where the United States Coast Guard conducted a hearing on proposed regulations governing movement of oil tankers on Washington's inland waters.

When the cardboard Dispoiler hit a rock, a stream of oil (a huge sheet of black plastic) escaped and covered the plaza.

Trapped under the "oil" were demonstrators costumed as a crab, a geoduck, a starfish and a killer whale.

Watching from above was the popular Seattle cartoon character Dipstick Duck. Hung around Dipstick's neck was a sign that read "Don't make me a gooey duck."

The cleanup crew was unable to do an adequate containment job with its brooms and vacuum cleaners.

While the oil oozed and the crews worked, other members of the foundation paraded with signs reading: "Oil is not crude, it's downright obscene." "Arco is doing a hull of a job on us."

Pro-Marxist Faction in Rhodesia Feared

By MURREY MARDER
Washington Post

LONDON — U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance has come out of his first on-the-scene exposure to the Rhodesian crisis with heightened alarm that a pro-Marxist, black-ruled nation may emerge there through a convergence of the most militant nationalists now on opposing sides.

United Nations Ambassador Andrew Young, the "point man" on the Carter administration's African strategy from the outset, sees the same risk as even a larger probability.

Young, however, and his own close associates, do not hold the same degree of apprehension about Africans who come to power professing Marxist-Leninist commitment. Under this assessment, the African factor will dilute greatly or nullify the danger that such nations will topple into Soviet-Cuban, or even Chinese Communist alignment. This assessment is shared by many, but by no means all, African leaders.

This difference in perception, denied on both sides as policy discord inside the Carter administration, nevertheless can have important impact in the weeks ahead on shaping U.S. policy on Africa. This, in turn, can affect the domestic political consequences of the policy, which can be very high if the administration is perceived to have bungled its diplomacy.

American policy-makers on the tense, troubled 18,000-mile, five-day Vance mission to Africa, a joint venture with British Foreign Secretary David Owen, have concluded that probably only a shift of alliances among Rhodesia's rival black leaders can head off black-against-black civil war. The odds on that war coming now appear higher than ever.

Specialists on the dual mission believe that the only chance for a peaceful settlement in Rhodesia is defections in the leaderships of the so-called "internal" and "external" factions, and a new alignment.

This means that either black moderates in the new interim government of Prime Minister Ian D. Smith and three black nationalists, would join moderates in the rival Patriotic Front, the guerrilla alliance whose co-presidents are Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe. Or conversely, the more militant of the black nationalists who are now in camp with Smith — Bishop Abel Muzorewa, the Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole and Chief Jeremiah Chirau — would join the Patriotic Front's most militant leader.

The switching concept is not a new brainstorm; it has been a continuallyy enticing option for strategists and doubly so since Smith and the internal moderates made their own power deal. That brought them into office last month as Rhodesia's interim white-black government pledged to shift to black majority rule by December 31, excluding the Patriotic Front.

What is significantly new is that for the first time one form of potential switch now has been privately discussed on the scene in Salisbury at the highest level, with the first American secretary of state ever to visit the Rhodesian capital.

Vance and Owen, it was learned, on Monday explored this with Smith and his new partners. Specifically they considered the possibility of drawing Nkomo, the most patriarchal figure among all the Rhodesian nationalists, into an alliance with Muzorewa and Sithole for an ultimate black-ruled Rhodesia.

This has been an option privately suggsted by many, especially in the last month. But the counterpart of this, of considerable concern to Anglo-American and moderate African specialists, is that a Mugabe-Sithole combination may emerge, uniting the militants in a stronger race to win control of Rhodesia.

300-Year Term

CHICAGO (AP) — A 300-year prison sentence has been imposed on a former member of the Black Panther party for the rape and attempted murder of a woman Christmas Day, 1970. Circuit Judge Frank Barbero said Jerry Dunigan, 30, played with the woman and her husband "like cat and mouse."

U.S. Visit Set

TOKYO (AP) — Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda will leave April 30 for an eight-day state visit to the United States that will include a May 3 meeting in Washington with President Carter, the government said today.

Other stops will include Portland, Ore.; New York, and Hawaii.

Fukuda, accompanied by Foreign Minister Sunao Osonoda and External Economic Minister Nobuhiko Ushiba, also is to meet UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim in New York on May 4.

Discussions of monetary and trade issues and Japan's trade surplus are expected to dominate his visit, the government said.

The sources said Fukuda was reported to plan to seek Carter's understanding on a plan to reduce the surplus to $6 billion in fiscal 1978.

U.S. Gov't Buys Safety Car, for $250,000

WASHINGTON (UPI) — For $250,000, the federal government has acquired a one-of-a-kind car that is expected to set design standards for cars on the market in 10 years.

The car, built under a National Highway Traffic Safety Administration contract, can carry six passengers, get 27.5 miles per gallon and protect riders in front end crashes at 40 miles per hour.

Transportation Secretary Brock Adams said Detroit could probably build such a car today at current prices plus about 10 percent, but would have to undertake a massive retooling of production lines.

The car was built by Minicars Inc., Goleta, Calif. The company took an eight-cylinder, '77 Chevrolet Impala and reduced its weight by 1,000 lbs. through the use of hollow steel sections filled with energy absorbing plastic foam.

Watchers Killed

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Guards escorting Uganda's vice-president shot and killed at least 12 persons after a road accident in which the official was hurt, a Kenyan newspaper says.

The Daily Nation, quoting sources in the Ugandan capital of Kampala, says the guards thought an assassinatioon was being attempted and "opened fire on villagers who ran to the scene of the crash and people in a truck that collided head-on with the official's car."

Gen. Mustafa Idrisi, the vice-president and defence minister, "suffered multiple injuries" in the accident Wednesday near Kampala, the English-language daily says.

Security forces arrested about 160 villagers on suspicion of having engineered the accident, in which the driver of the truck was killed, the newspaper says.

"Idrisi and his driver were flown to Cairo for treatment," the newspaper says.

No confirmation of the newspaper account was available. Radio Uganda said Thursday Idrisi has been flown abroad for treatment after being seriously injured in an auto accident.

Middle Ground Found in Gas Row

WASHINGTON (AP) — Negotiators for the U.S. House of Representatives and Senate, after a meeting with Energy Secretary James Schlesinger lasting into the early-morning hours, said today they have reached a basic accord on the proposed deregulation of natural gas.

Although sources, who declined to be identified, said there was still a chance the negotiations may break down, most negotiators expressed guarded optimism that a compromise may be near. An agreement would break the deadlock stalling President Carter's energy program.

They said two relatively minor differences remain to be resolved on the controversial deregulation issue.

But Representative Harley Staggers (Dem. W.Va.) said he hopes that those differences might be settled in about an hour later today. Senator Henry Jackson (Dem. Wash.), who leads the Senate negotiators, said the negotiators decided to sleep on it because "some of us are tired."

Another meeting was scheduled for later in the day to take up the issues not yet resolved. Both involve the kinds of gas that will be eligible for deregulation on Jan. 1, 1985, the date negotiators have tentatively selected for lifting federal price controls.

The negotiators emerged with Schlesinger shortly before 3 a.m. EST after nearly 13 straight hours of closed-door negotiations. Congressional leaders had hoped to be able to finish by midnight Thursday night to keep the energy program's first anniversary from slipping by, but missed the self-imposed deadline.

Representative John Dingell (Dem. Mich.), a leading House negotiator, said that the tentative agreement probably will cost the average homeowner using natural gas $40 to $50 more than under either Carter's original plan or under existing law. However, he said these figures are general.

The agreement would lift federal price controls from newly found gas in January 1985 and allow an increase of slightly more than 10 per cent a year in the regulated price between now and then, the sources said.

It is a middle ground between the original Carter plan, passed by the House, which calls for continued price controls on natural gas, and the Senate-passed bill for deregulation in two years.

Volkswagen Workers Vote Strike

HANNOVER (Reuter) — Workers at West Germany's largest auto-maker, Volkswagenwerke AG, have voted overwhelmingly to go on strike, the Metalworkers Union said today.

It said 88 per cent of its 77,861 members voted for the strike after pay talks with the management broke down. The union is demanding an eight-per-cent increase, compared with the management's offer of five per cent.

The mainly state-owned company employs about 106,000 people in its six domestic plants.

Publishers Rap Charges

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Daily Newspaper Publishers Association has accused the federal government of discrimination for charging Toronto Sun under the Official Secrets Act.

Publishers at the association's annual meeting Thursday said the government charged only The Sun with receiving and communicating a top-secret RCMP document, although other media and a member of Parliament released similar information.

A motion passed by the association condemns the government. It asks the group's legal counsel to examine the act as it relates to newspapers to determine what representations the group might make to government to have the act altered.

The Sun, its publisher, J. D. Creighton, and its editor-in-chief, Peter Worthington, were charged last month in connection with documents on Soviet espionage in Canada.

The motion said the association does not necessarily support the action of The Sun.

Publisher J. P. O'Callaghan of Edmonton Journal, who introduced the motion, said the government's decision to prosecute The Sun was based on vindictiveness.

He accused the government of attempting to silence The Sun, which he described as "a persistent and probably cruel critic of the Liberal party."

"There is no doubt that what has happened is discriminatory, that The Sun has been singled out as the target merely because is it The Sun and because it is anti-Trudeau."

Michael L. Davies, publisher of Kingston Whig-Standard, said it appeared The Sun was singled out for special treatment.

"It was not the only one that released information but was the only one charged," he said.

John D. Muir, publisher of Hamilton Spectator, described the government's action as discriminatory justice because television broadcasters who released similar information were not charged.

O'Callaghan said the government ignored other media that used information similar to that printed by The Sun and did not prosecute the member of Parliament "who clearly had access to such a secret document and made political hay out of it."

He was referring to Tom Cossitt, Conservative MP for Leeds, who discussed the document inside and out of the Commons. Justice Minister Ron Basford said Cossitt was not charged because a court might rule his remarks were covered by the blanket of parliamentary privilege.

The Sun situation was originally raised at the association meeting by James Johnston, publisher of Port Hope Guide, who said the charges against The Sun related to the much broader problem of freedom of the press.

RCMP Don't Need Reminder - Basford

OTTAWA (CP) — Despite recent revelations of hundreds of illegal break-ins by RCMP investigators, there is no need to remind RCMP members that they should obey the law, Justice Minister Ron Basford said.

"We have been saying for many years...that the mandate of the RCMP, its members and officers was clearly to live within the law and under the rule of the law," Basford told the Commons.

He was responding to questions from Stuart Leggatt (NDP—New Westminster) who referred to testimony before the McDonald royal commission investigating RCMP wrongdoings.

The commission had been told that searches without warrant could be in the public interest because they could help detect crime.

CNR's $28M Profit Best Since '43

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian National Railways turned a profit of $28 million in its 1977 operations, its best financial showing since 1943, according to its annual report tabled Thursday in the Commons.

It was the second year in a row that the Crown corporation made a profit and there are predictions it will do even better this year after turning over most of its money-losing passenger services to VIA Rail.

The railway also is hoping to get parliamentary approval for a recapitalization plan that would transform $808 million in debt to common shares — a move that would cut down on heavy debt charges it must meet.

CNR President Robert Bandeen has forecast profits in the area of $200 million within five years if the recapitalization plans are approved.

The railway had gross revenues of $2,656.7 million in 1977 compared with $2,454.5 million in 1976.

The annual report credits the profit to "restructuring of the corporation to enable it to be managed in an efficient and businesslike fashion."

Under Bandeen, the CNR has been broken into so-called profit centres. Of these, CN Rail, the U.S.-operated Grand Trunk Corp. and CN Telecommunications were the major profit winners in 1977.

CN Rail turned a profit of $199.4 million, up from the $157.1 million a year earlier.

Grand Trunk earned a profit of $28.6 million compared to $14.6 million in 1976.

CN Telecommunications made a profit of $25.2 million up from $20.1 million in 1976.

No-Deal Policy Urged In Jails

OTTAWA (CP) — Union spokesmen for federal prison guards said Thursday a "no-deals" policy should apply not only to hostage-takings but to peaceful prisoner protests such as sit-ins and hunger strikes.

The point was made to the Commons justice committee by William Camche of Prince Albert, president of the solicitor-general's component, Public Service Alliance of Canada, and secretary-treasurer Paul Caouette.

Caouette, in a brief read to the committee, said the "no-deals" policy adopted last year by the prison system "should apply in all circumstances and not only when lives of employees or anyone else's are at stake."

Prisoners, he said, can air grievances through members of Parliament, citizen advisory committees, grievance procedures, and officials.

"No sit-ins or hunger strikes should be tolerated under any circumstances."

Camche said such protests often lead to violence. Peaceful sit-ins at Laval and British Columbia prisons had ended in riots in 1976.

Mark MacGuigan (L—Windsor-Walkerville), committee chairman, said he feels there is nothing wrong with such protests where there is no coercion.

He mentioned a hunger strike last summer in which prisoners protested lack of government action on an all-party report to Parliament proposing prison reform.

Caouette said prisoners stock up on candy and pop before such strikes.

Camche said guards support a "no-deals" policy but want to ensure communications continue in cases of hostage-taking.

He attributed a rash of hostage-takings in the mid-1970s to a deal made with prisoner Andy Bruce at Saskatchewan Penitentiary five years ago.

The union said tear gas "is the only sure and safe method that is harmless even though uncomfortable for a while."

It criticized MPs for naming prison employees in the report to Parliament. This had affected not only the guards but their wives and children.

"In this vein there was a great deal made about the Millhaven Institution (and) the excesses of staff brutality, abuses and harassment, with prisoners responding in kind," the union said.

Despite this, "no major disciplinary measures were taken against any of the personnel at Millhaven" despite the fact a special management team was chosen to run the prison for six months last year.

The MPs had said that "a state of lawlessness" had existed at Millhaven with guards hog-tying and gassing prisoners, or letting loose dogs on them.

The union said the MPs seemed to forget "the type of inmates" Millhaven held—"troublesome inmates" transferred from other prisons because they wouldn't cooperate.

"What happened at Millhaven in the last year?" the brief said. "They have had three directors, 27 officers were assaulted, a unit was partially destroyed, hostage-takings, attempted escapes — one of which resulted in the death of an inmate — and sit-ins."

"In the latest incident at Millhaven, the staff — for the first time — were commended for the maturity and restraint they demonstrated in what was called a potentially volatile situation."

The commendation came from J. D. Clark, acting director of the prison system's Ontario region, after a demonstration in which more than 300 men refused to return to their cells in protest against conditions in the "special handling unit." It ended peacefully.

INTEREST IN MILITARY UP

TORONTO (CP) — Defence Minister Barney Danson said Thursday there is an increasing interest in the military among young people.

They seem to want something . . . to identify with, some challenge and discipline," Danson said in an interview following a speech to the Royal Canadian Military Institute.

"They want to develop skills they wouldn't develop otherwise."

The defence minister said he told the institute that the two air reserve squadrons in Toronto and those in Montreal will each receive twin-engined Otter aircraft soon.

He said the single-engined Otters are to be phased out.

Petty Cash Skimming Bared

OTTAWA (CP) — Superficial auditing techniques and irregularities in authorizing petty cash vouchers for the Canadian Forces Central Band were revealed Thursday during a court martial of WO Kenneth Cooper.

Internal auditor Chief WO J.A. Desbiens testified the petty cash vouchers showed thousands of boxes of staples had reportedly been purchased.

He said the last internal audit of band accounts was done in 1975 and agreed under examination that auditing precedures were superficial.

Cooper has been charged with stealing $93,000 worth of band equipment and using forged supply documents to obtain $50,000 in public funds.

Cooper decided if instruments needed repair, who carried them out and inspected them when returned, evidence showed.

Ethics of Alley Cat Charge Angers Lang

OTTAWA (CP) — Transport Minister Otto Lang was accused Thursday night of having the personal ethics of an alley cat.

The charge was made by Progressive Conservative House Leader Walter Baker as the six-day budget debate ended in the Commons. It will be reviewed by Speaker James Jerome today to see if Baker must withdraw his remarks.

Lang got into a slanging match with Opposition members as he wrapped up his budget speech with a personal attack on Conservative Leader Joe Clark.

He said Clark had succeeded at nothing else in his career, but now hopes to succeed at being prime minister.

Then he said: "He did succeed at something. He won the (Conservative) leadership convention by being everybody's third choice."

Baker, who had been shouting "Cheap, cheap, cheap," throughout the minister's remarks, rose on a point of order.

"I just want to say that in the course of this speech, the minister of transport had shown the personal ethics of an alley cat," he said.

Lang had difficulty hearing what Baker had said, because the House had erupted into near chaos with members of every party hooting and banging their desks.

Lang said he suspected it had included slurring language. He said he would demand Baker's remarks be withdrawn if the record of the debate showed the Conservative had used unparliamentary language.

The minister then went on to accuse Baker of trying to attack him since he became transport minister "in a way that was despicable and beneath contempt."

He accused Baker of not taking seriously the damage he was doing to the parliamentary system with his personal attacks.

Baker replied that he would withdraw any remarks that might have been unparliamentary once they appeared in Hansard.

WHEN IS A LADY NOT. . .?

OTTAWA (CP) — Is it offensive to call a female member of Parliament the honorable lady instead of the honorable member?

Progressive Conservative Leader Joe Clark appeared to think so in the Commons Thursday when he corrected Prime Minister Trudeau who referred to Flora MacDonald (PC-Kingston-and-the-Islands) as the honorable lady.

"The leader of the opposition corrects me. He says I should say honorable member," Trudeau said.

"I often say honorable gentleman. Maybe that's an abuse when we address the other side," Trudeau added, prompting a round of howls and desk-thumping applause from Liberal ranks.

"If we can say honorable gentleman I don't understand why we can't say honorable lady without the honorable gentleman taking offence."

Budget Debate Ends Without a Vote

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Jean Chretien's budget was approved by the Commons without a vote Thursday night after MPs spent the day criticizing each other's economic policies.

By agreement among all parties there was no formal vote on the budget. The Liberal majority had turned back two Opposition motions of non-confidence in the government's economic policies in two recorded votes during the debate.

The Commons today was to debate legislation to allow the federal cabinet to control gold coin production and to improve the financing of the Export Development Corp.

During the final debate Employment Minister Bud Cullen said the Opposition is robbing people of hope by misrepresenting and inflating unemployment figures.

He called a three-member Conservative fact-finding committee on unemployment the "three hand-wringers."

Earlier the Opposition attacked the government during the question period for failing to assist the poor during the 10 years that Trudeau has been in office. The attack came on the 10th anniversary of the swearing-in of Trudeau as prime minister.

Trudeau rejected the charges, saying the number of persons below the poverty line—about $12,000 a year—has been almost cut in half while he has been prime minister.

James McGrath (St. John's East), a member of the Conservative study group on unemployment, quoted a study published this week which said the government's income redistribution programs since 1970 have failed to improve the position of the poor in comparison with the rest of the population.

Vote Fever Display

OTTAWA (CP) — The business of the Commons transport committee almost came to a standstill Thursday as Liberals and Progressive Conservatives hurled verbal abuse at one another.

In a display of election fever, the Liberals accused the Tories of delaying unduly a government bill to recapitalize the Canadian National Railways.

In turn the Conservatives said the Liberals were trying to ram the bill through the committee because of the impending general election.

Maurice Harquail (L—Restigouche) touched off the storm when he moved a motion—later rescinded—calling for the committee to begin the final stages of its study of the bill.

Harquail said the committee already had eight meetings to consider general questions and now should bring its study to a close.

Ron Huntington (PC—Capilano) accused the goverbment members of trying to ram the bill through committee.

And Jack Murta (PC—Lisgar) said his party considered the bill to convert $808 million of CNR debt into common stock very important. Eight meetings were not enough to study the bill.

Murta also said that if Prime Minister Trudeau calls the election within a few days or a week, there was no way the CNR bill could get final approval from Parliament.

But if Trudeau was going to wait another two months or so to call the election, there was plenty of time to get it passed.

The MPs also got into a shouting match about the individual attendance of members.

Order was restored after chairman John Campbell (L—LaSalle-Emard-Cote) agreed to call a meeting of party representatives to consider how the committee will proceed next week.

Pension 'Snatch' Assailed

OTTAWA (FP) — The government policy of snatching the spouse's allowance away from women under 65 after their pensioner husbands die, was soundly condemned in the Commons Thursday by Opposition Leader Joe Clark and Kingston and the Islands Tory Flora MacDonald.

The practice was singled out for particular attention after Prime Minister Trudeau was accused—10 years to the day after he took power—of failing during his decade as PM to significantly improve the economic position of the poor.

Rape Relief Grant Eyed

Victoria Rape Relief may still get a grant in spite of having been turned down by the intermunicipal committee.

Shirley Dowell, chairman of the Capital Regional District's grants committee and a member of the intermunicipal committee, said Thursday that one of the reasons the grant application was refused was the lack of an audited financial statement.

At the urging of Saanich Ald. John Mika she agreed to bring the matter up again at the next meeting of the intermunicipal committee.

She said the provincial government has withdrawn its financing because of a lack of accountability by the group.

"I deplore the provincial government's refusal to take the responsibility but I don't think just deploring is good enough. I would like to make a motion that we recommend to the board that some of the money left in our balance be given to Rape Relief for this year as a temporary measure," Mika said.

The organization had asked for a grant of $16,563. The regional grants committee has some $32,000 remaining in its budget.

Mika withdrew his motion when Dowell said the matter will be raised again at the intermunicipal level.

Mika emphasised funding is a provincial reponsibility since the government is responsible for the administration of justice.

The guided tours will be held from 12 noon to 4 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

In charge of the program is Ron Seaborn, chairman of the association's outdoor committee.

While most the visitors will come as individuals, organized groups, such as the Girl Guides, Brownies and garden clubs are expected to particpated in the guided tours.

Drug-Running Grannys Jailed

SYDNEY, Australia — Two U.S. women who smuggled about two tons of hashish into Australia earlier this year were sentenced today to 14 years imprisonment each by a Sydney court.

Vera Todd Hays, 59, and Florice May Bessire, 61, both of La Pine, Ore., pleaded guilty March 15 to charges of smuggling the hashish into the country under the floorboards of their van.

During a 15-minute session of the district court, Judge James Staunton said that despite the good records of the women and the respect they had in their community, it should be made clear that such smuggling would not be permitted. He said the punishment represented Australia's "disgust and horror"of drug trafficking.

Miss Bessire, the first to be sentenced, broke into tears. Miss Hays, in pain from a back injury, showed no emotion. She had to be helped to her feet by a matron.

The women were led out of the courtroom under tight security. They smiled faintly at a large gathering of local reporters.

MAGGIE BACK IN OTTAWA

OTTAWA — Margaret Trudeau has been back in town lately and has been seen playing with her three children at the residence of her estranged husband, Prime Minister Trudeau.

Does that mean there is some hope that the couple may reunite? a reporter asked Trudeau at a news conference Thursday.

"I pay staff to say no comment to such questions," Trudeau replied.

Drug Study For Ford

LONG BEACH, Calif. — Former U.S. president Gerald Ford has been sitting in on a hospital program on drug and alcohol dependence to help him better understand his wife's current treatment for over-medication, his executive assistant says.

"It's a combination of materials that expands peoples' awareness of different types of dependencies," Bob Barrett said Thursday.

Betty Ford, 60, was admitted to the hospital April 11 for what doctors described as a "problem with medication." She is reported to have been taking the medication for pain caused by a pinched nerve in her neck and for arthritis.

Barrett could not say how long Mrs. Ford will remain in hospital.

HONEYMOON IS OVER

BURLINGTON, Vt. — Jerry Jenkins, the honeymooning Vermonter taken to heart by New York City until police arrested him on bad-cheque charges, has been given a five- to 15-year jail sentence.

Jenkins, 27, was honeymooning in New York City last December when a man stole his car.

New Yorkers responded by showering Jenkins and his wife with free meals and accommodations, and a visit with an apologetic Mayor Abraham Beame.

But with all the publicity, Vermont officials recognized Jenkins as a man wanted for cashing bad cheques in Burlington. He was arrested and returned to Vermont to face the charges.

Death of Singer Rumors Denied

LOS ANGELES — Reports Thursday of the death of big band singer Kitty Kallen apparently were false.

Hollywood friends of Miss Kallen told United Press International they had spoken with the singer and that she was alive and well in an unidentified town in New Jersey, where she lives with her husband, publicist Bud Granoff.

The friends said they had spoken with her after the reports and she and Granoff were "very distressed".

A woman saying she was Miss Kallen called some news organizations in New York and Los Angeles, denying she had died.

MIRACLE-GRO works where other types fail.
In very poor soils, plants fed the MIRACLE-GRO way produced good tomatoes, while most plants fed with other types failed to survive.

*All tested plant foods used according to label directions.

Why MIRACLE-GRO is called "THE MIRACLE VEGETABLE FOOD"

Helen Remembers Wedding. . .Hundred Years Ago

MARYVILLE, Ill. (UPI) — Helen Rushing easily can remember her wedding 100 years ago.

Mrs. Rushing, who will celebrate her 113th birthday Saturday, married shortly before her 13th birthday in 1878.

"We got married at 9 o'clock at night," she said. "It was a Sunday night. I was just a kid. The bed fell down that first night."

Mrs. Rushing was married 18 years, then saw her husband and three of her four children die of typhoid fever. She survived the fever as well as 23 operations since that time.

"The Lord didn't want me, and the devil wouldn't have me," she said. "I had to stay."

Mrs. Rushing, who has lived in the Colonial Nursing Home since 1971, was born in Choctaw County, Miss., eight days after President Lincoln was assassinated in 1865.

Her mother died when she was 6, and her father, a Cherokee Indian, was unable to support the family.

Young Helen moved in with Sarah Brumfield and her 14 children. After Mrs. Rushing's husband died, she worked much of her life at Charity Hospital in New Orleans and later moved to the St. Louis area.

"I've been treated pretty rough sometimes," she said. "I worked hard, never did holler about it."

The white-haired woman has a radiant smile and friendly eyes. Although confined to a wheelchair, she has fairly good health and is alert and happy. Every Sunday night she attends Pleasant Ridge Baptist Church "and when they have a revival, I go every night."

At a party in her honor this week she ate cake and ice cream and accepted birthday greetings from friends.

"I'm living good," she said.

$80 Million Overrrun Queried

Documented evidence of an $80 million overrun on a major B.C. Hydro power project is one of several key matters that should be raised by the legislature's committee investigating Crown corporations, according to the Vancouver Province.

The newspaper said today internal Hydro material details illegality in procedures for re-calling tenders for the project and there are questions on bidding irregularities, construction failures and equipment losses at another project.

The newspaper's questions were originally asked of Hydro chairman Robert Bonner, and then passed on to Finance Minister Evan Wolfe, the minister responsible for the corporation.

Wolfe told the legislature Wednesday that because of the detailed nature of the questions and because he only recently took responsibility for Hydro, he was passing the questions to the committee.

Elwood Veitch, chairman of the committee, said Thursday that a sub-committee of the group will decide Monday how to handle the questions.

C. W. Nash, general manager of corporate affairs for Hydro, said in a letter to the newspaper that Hydro could not open its records to the paper because Hydro reports to the legislature.

Meanwhile in the legislature, Dennis Cocke (NDP—New Westminister) said he is upset by Veitch's original response to Wolfe's proposal. Veitch said Wednesday he was more than happy to get the questions and would begin work on them as soon as possible.

"I serve notice that there will be some trouble over this in our committee," Cocke said. "There are others giving directions to this committee and that should not be."

Italy Government Praying for Moro

Times News Services

ROME — Premier Giulio Andreotti and advisers conferred early today on whether to negotiate with Red Brigades terrorists who said kidnapped ex-Premier Aldo Moro was alive but threatened to kill him in 48 hours.

Andreotti was closeted with leaders of his ruling Christian Democratic Party at party headquarters, across the square from the baroque Church of Jesus where they all prayed for Moro's life late Thursday.

Moro's family, some of his friends and some intellectuals and churchmen are reported to have urged the government to relent in its opposition to negotiate with the kidnappers. Some small political factions to the left of the Communists also have asked the government to negotiate.

The family in a statement appealed to the government to "take a realistic attitude and declare availability to ascertain terms" for his release.

Fuel Depot Pickets Withdraw

Local 213 of the Teamsters Union agreed Thursday to stop picketing Chevron Canada Ltd.'s fuel supply depot in Victoria.

Union members began picketing the facility last Friday because the oil company was supplying fuel to AirWest Airlines Ltd.

About 95 pilots, maintenance workers and office workers have been on strike at AirWest for more than five months.

The union agreed at a formal Labor Relations Board hearing to remove its picket line after Chevron said it would stop selling fuel to AirWest until Wednesday night, when the board is expected to decide whether the pickets are legal.

The airline has maintained reduced operations throughout the dispute, except for an 18-day period when it was shut down due to safety regulations.

FALCON GIVEAWAY PROTEST

EDMONTON (CP) — Two city naturalists have strongly criticized the federal government for giving a rare Alberta bird, a Gyrfalcon, to King Khaled of Saudi Arabia.

The bird was raised in captivity at a Canadian Wildlife Service (CWS) breeding station in Wainwright, Alta., and is scheduled to leave Edmonton International Airport today for Ottawa and on to Saudi Arabia.

"I'm completely opposed to it," Robert Lister, a member of the Canadian Federation of Naturalists, said Thursday.

"Why we should be doing it is beyond me," he said.

"We've been protecting birds for years and opposing the sale of them. Why should we give one away?"

"I'm definitely against it," said Dr. Louis Fenna, Edmonton Bird Club president. "The gift may one day lead to the export licensing of Canadian birds and shouldn't be allowed."

Dave Fyfe, a technician at the Wainwright station, said Gyrfalcons are not on the endangered species list.

100 Tots Facing Car Crash Death

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Accidents are the leading cause of death in children more than one year of age.

The car is the biggest killer of them all, causing more deaths than all other accidents combined.

Sobering statistics.

They're in a report to the B.C. Medical Association prepared by Drs. Andrew Gillespie and Peter Ransford of Victoria, and Dr. Herb Parkin of Vancouver.

They show 100 children five years of age and under are killed annually by car accidents in Canada.

Members of a subcommittee of the association's pediatric division, the doctors warn that 40 times that number are seriously injured in car accidents.

Gillespie says British Columbia can expect one tenth of the national deaths and injuries.

Provincial seatbelt legislation which went into effect Oct. 1, 1977, excluded children six years and under because no national standards have been set for child restraint systems in cars.

A contract has been awarded to the Canadian Standards Association in Ottawa to carry out research on what are defined as "infant carriers" and recommendations are expected to be received soon.

Gillespie says studies carried out in the state of Washington during the past six years reveal that no children have been killed while using suitable carriers.

While the B.C. legislation requires no protection for children under six it still holds the driver responsible.

Gillespie says this could prove a "terrible responsibility" and recalls an accident near Elk Lake several years ago. A young mother was doing a car pool run with children on their way to a nursery school. When the crash occurred five children were thrown out of the car, three of them receiving brain injuries.

In their report, the three doctors tell why children in this age group are the most vulnerable.

The skull is softer than an adult's and larger in proportion to the rest of the body. The ribbage is thinner and more elastic. A young child's prominent abdomen gives only limited protection to the large internal organs. The pelvic dimensions are limited by contrast and these factors make it important to provide crash protection for the infant and small child.

★ ★ ★

The committee has studied various types of available infant carriers and recommend, among others, the G.M. Child "Love Seat", the Dorel Trav-L-Guard, the Strolee "Wee Care" and Swyngomatic and the Century Motor-Toter.

Gillespie says the recommended infant carriers are available at The Bay, Woodwards, Eaton's and some automobile agencies.

Infants weighing less than 20 pounds should be in rear facing seats, anchored by the lapbelt. By facing the rear deceleration forces are spread over a large proportion of the baby's body.

"However, the rear-facing infant seat does provide protection which enables it to be used in the front seat," says Gillespie and his co-workers.

There are two basic designs for children weighing between 20 and 40 pounds. One is the five-point safety harness which spreads the force of the impact over the strongest part of the child's body. The other is seats with protective shields that allow the force of a collision to be spread over a large area of the body.

Children weighing more than 40 pounds or more than five years old should be strapped in with the lapbelt and sit upright against the back seat. The belt should be low against the hips and adjusted for a snug fit to prevent riding up across the abdomen. A shoulder belt should be used so long as it crosses the child's chest and not the neck or face. Two children should never be strapped by the same belt.

An infant and child car safety program should be part of every maternity service, the doctors recommend. Hospital inservice teaching programs should be promoted in every B.C. hospital.

Information should be made available at doctors' offices, hospitals and public health units.

"It is hoped that with this type of community program throughout B.C. the needs for automotive safety for this young age group will soon be voluntarily covered," the committee says. "It should then be only a matter of liaison with government to cover all age groups under the seatbelt legislation in the Motor Vehicle Act."

$757,000 FOR UVIC

Gov't Switch Study

Five University of Victoria political scientists have won a $757,000 grant to conduct a five-year study of the impact of change on government and politics in B.C.

The research team will focus on the period 1969 to 1978, which saw the Social Credit Party defeated by the NDP and then return to power.

In 1972 W.A.C. Bennett was defeated after being premier for 20 years. The NDP, under now Opposition leader Dave Barrett, held power until toppled by Premier Bill Bennett in December 1975.

The project is designed to provide insight into the effect of change from one government to another on the structure and functioning of governmental processes in the province.

The researchers are Walter Young, chairman of UVic's political science department, and professors Neil Swainson, Norman Ruff, Terry Morley and Jeremy Wilson.

The money is being provided by the Social Science and Humanities Research Council, which is funded by the federal government's Canada Council.

In a news release, Young states that one of the principal advantages of the funding is that it enables the political science department to bring to the university a number of scholars to engage in research on the project, and to provide support for conferences and public lectures.

'MLAs Aren't Overworked'

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

A former member of the legislature said Thursday MLAs are not overworked and there is no reason to increase their number.

Ex-Liberal leader David Anderson told a royal commission on electoral reform any pressure to increase the size of the 55-seat legislature should be disregarded.

He said the facilities in the Legislative Buildings cannot adequately handle many more members and the MLAs, aside from party leaders and cabinet ministers, don't need extra help.

"There is no overwhelming workload that requires an increase in their numbers," he said.

"They have a workload to handle, sure, but if they want to do it they can and if they don't they won't."

Increasing the number of members won't change that situation, he added.

Anderson, like others who made appearances at the commission's 17th public hearing, told commissioner Larry Eckardt he favors a limit on election expenses.

He said he also favors dual-member ridings and said a close look should be given the alternate or preferential ballot, a system whereby voters don't just mark one candidate but list the candidates in order of preference.

On the subject of campaign contributions, John Green, executive assistant to Conservative leader Vic Stephens, said political contributions should be limited to individuals and corporate contributions should be prohitibited.

He said there is no question that in politics "he who pays the piper calls the tune," meaning that corporate donations result in political favors.

He said there should be a limit on campaign expenses, adding that $10,000 seems to be adequate although any figure up to $20,000 would be all right.

Green, who appeared on his own behalf and not as a spokesman for the Conservative party, said candidates should have to get 50 per cent of the vote before being elected and some system should be adopted for giving tax rebates for political contributions to those who do not have any taxable income.

Irene Block, a Conservative candidate in the last provincial election, made a similar call for campaign expense limits in defending her brief which she submitted Wednesday when the commission met in Sidney.

She also suggested that no person or company shall donate more than a set amount to any political group or candidate.

Anything over and above that amount would be put in a trust fund.

Charles Barber, NDP MLA for Victoria, submitted a brief suggesting that in order to avoid confusion, an effort should be made to make municipal and provincial electoral boundaries the same.

The commission held a public hearing in Duncan today and next week moves to the northern B.C. ridings.

Two Picked By NDP

Two candidates were named Thursday by local NDP riding associations anticipating a federal election this summer.

Gretchen Brewin, 39-year-old housewife and political science graduate, was nominated by the Victoria constituency association, and former North Saanich mayor Paul Grieve, a land developer, was chosen by Esquimalt-Saanich NDP members.

Grieve, 34, of North Saanich, will face incumbent Conservative Donald Munro, whom he claimed is not the fighter the riding needs.

Brewin, a former NDP school trustee in Scarborough, Ont., is the wife of B.C. NDP president John Brewin and a resident of Fairfield. She will attempt to win the seat held by Tory Allan McKinnon.

Employment will be the key election issue, Brewin said.

She is at present on a federal contract with Prime Time, a project dealing with needs of women in middle age.

Victoria NDP MLA Charles Barber told the 200 people at the nomination meeting that the more than 1,000 Victoria NDP members are an important factor.

Picture Sparks Squabble

A picture in the Times of B.C. Federation of Labor secretary-treasurer Len Guy eating at a non-union Victoria restaurant March 29 touched off a heated argument at a Victoria Labor Council meeting this week.

Council delegate Tom Luscombe suggested the council write Guy stating the next time he or any other trade union brass come to Victoria they check with the council as to which eating establishments are organized.

Luscombe, delegate from the Hotel, Restaurant and Culinary Employees and Bartenders Union, said photos of Guy and other federation officials eating at Chez Pierre are embarrassing to his union.

Daryl Anderson, of the Candian Union of Public Employees, took the occasion to attack Luscombe's union saying it is due to its ineptnitude that it is difficult to tell which restaurants are union or non-union.

"If that union would make more inroads into organizing the hotels . . . then we would have more to choose from."

Jim Walker, another CUPE delegate, turned on Anderson saying there are lists available of union restaurants.

The whole matter was finally tabled.

Motorcyclists to Fight For Their Favorite Hill

The Victoria Motorcycle Club lost its hill last week but Thursday served notice it won't take the loss sitting down.

Club spokesman Gary Nordstrom said in an interview the membership is fighting mad over a decision by the Victoria and Saanich parks committee to cancel the annual Mount Douglas Hill Climb.

He applealed to the public for support in the club's bid to win back the hill.

The climbs on the back side of the mountain have been held since 1920, and are rated as one of the top annual events in the 100-member motorcycle club.

"It's very important to us, it's got a lot of history conected with it," said Nordstrom.

The competition sees about 50 riders between the ages of 15 and 50 competing in four categories. The race, which is a straight uphill battle of man and machine versus gravity and a dirt track, is a one-day affair.

Nordstrom admits the race is noisy, but he says nobody has ever complained to the club.

At the committee meeting, said Nordstrom, noise was one of the reasons cited by the aldermen who voted to withhold this year's permit.

"It's noisy, sure, but we don't get complaints. Most of the people that live around there come to watch. It's an exciting event."

He said the club members were shocked this week when they were informed of the committee's decision.

Nordstrom said the club doesn't really know how to fight to get the hill back, but hopes the public will rally to its support.

"All we want is that one hill . . . we don't have another place to race. It's an ideal hill and there isn't another like it."

He said he thought one of the main reasons the club request for its annual permit was rejected was because of the motorcycle riders who use the horse trails in the park. Several years ago the trails were put off limits to bikes, but they're still used frequently despite the ban.

But Nordstrom said club members aren't the ones using the trails to go dirt-biking.

Nordstrom said the club has existed for more than 50 years in Victoria and has established a record of responsibility.

"This (parks committee) decision is really cutting against our tradition."

Overpass Requested

School children crossing the newly-widened Trans-Canada Highway at Helmcken Road each day need an overpass, says View Royal's Capital Regional District director.

Al Beasley has written Highways Minister Alex Fraser asking the minister to meet with him to discuss the problem.

Parents of children attending View Royal elementary school, who live in the northern section of View Royal, have protested the hazard.

Beasley said students attending the elementary school on Helmcken and Shoreline junior secondary school students are forced to cross the busy highway.

TOWN TALK

Author of the best mixed-metaphor quote of the week is Saanich alderman Dave Paterson.

During a planning committee discussion of the municipality's draft community plan, amid much waffling indecision, Paterson produced this exasperated comment: "It's imperative this council stand up and be counted and then sit down. We've got to finally pass it, put it to bed."

Well, okay. But, er, what was that again, Dave?

The old rockin' chair will get Grade 10 students from Cedar Hill junior secondary school who hope to raise $1,000 in a rock-a-thon Saturday at Market Square.

The youngsters want the money to help bring a group of exchange students from Quebec for a week. The Lions Club has started the fund with a $100 gift.

David Wilkins, fund-raising chairman, said of the visitors: "They paid all our expenses when we visited them last month and we feel we should do the same for them when they visit us in May."

More than 20 students, supported by pillows and Gravol, will try to rock for at least 12 hours from 8 a.m., rain or shine, and to collect money from individual sponsors donating on the basis of hours completed. One five-minute break per hour is permitted.

Potential sponsors may contact Wilkins at the school, 3910 Cedar Hill, 477-6945.

Scores of people on Saanich peninsula thought they saw a UFO Thursday night.

One man who spotted it slowly moving above Pat Bay Highway was so amazed he said he stopped his car and got out "to make sure I wasn't dreaming."

But alas, a visitor from outer space, the UFO wasn't.

An air controller at Pat Bay Airport said it was nothing more than a light plane, a Cessna 172, which had been equipped with an electronic billboard made up of several hundred lights under each wing.

The billboard, controlled by a computer, flashes out messages to observers below.

But obviously on this occasion, the message didn't get across.

Finamore was at The Empress from 1968 to 1973 and supervised Operation Teacup, the modernization of the interior of the hotel.

He caused a national furore when he said The Empress might need a government subsidy to keep it from being torn down. He later explained he meant in the distant future and The Empress is doing just fine in the 1970s.

Bellhop Gets Gong

Victoria's only girl bellhop has joined the ranks of the unemployed after three-and-a-half months on the job.

Nineteen-year-old Denise Steffens was told to pack her bags a week ago by her boss, Jim Tapson, manager of the Executive House Hotel, 777 Douglas.

He says she wasn't suited for the job. She says she was and notes no reason for her dismissal was given on her separation slip.

Denise says, however, she's through with bellhopping.

"I didn't mind the job but there were a lot of people who were offended by a girl carrying their bags. They just didn't like it," she says.

Tapson says that's news to him. "No one has ever complained to me about girls doing the job."

A young man has been hired to replace Denise.

NACHBAUR SETS PLAYOFF MARK AS BILLINGS COOLS OFF BRUINS

VANCOUVER (CP) — Don Nachbaur tied a Western Canada Hockey League playoff record Thursday with five goals as Billings Bighorns downed New Westminster Bruins 7-4 in a round-robin semi-final game before 8,838 fans.

Billings has a 1-0 record in the playoff series, while New Westminster is 1-1. Flin Flon Bombers are 0-1.

Nachbaur scored three goals in the first period as Billings took a 3-1 lead after one period.

Pat Conacher and Harvey Pocza scored for the Bighorns in the second period, before Nachbaur added two more, bothon deflections off New Westminster players. The five goals equalled the playoff record set in 1971 by Dave Kryskow of Edmonton Oil Kings.

New Westminster came back in the third period on goals by John Ogrodnick, Randy Irving and Bill Hobbins. Carl Van Harrewyn had scored in the first period.

Bruins outshot Billings 22-4 in the final period and 43-33 over the full 60 minutes.

The Bruins had won five straight playoff games, while Billings now has won 11 of 13 games in playoff action this year, including all seven away from home.

The series continues tonight with Flin Flon playing Billings at New Westminster.

Meanwhile, in Quebec City, it was reported that Wayne Babych of Portland WinterHawks was having contract talks with Quebec Nordiques of the World Hockey Association.

Time Zone Nor Rivals Slowing Team Canada

GOTEBORG, Sweden (CP) — Head coach Harry Howell said he wouldn't have been surprised if Team Canada had run out of steam along about the second period of Thursday night's exhibition game against Sweden, the club's second warmup for the world hockey championship.

Instead the Canadians got stronger as the game progressed and the result was a 4-0 victory against a Swedish national team aching for its first win at home after three losses—two to the Soviet Union and Tuesday's 5-1 defeat to Canada.

"I was really surprised because I thought all those time zones would finally catch up with us and we'd tire badly in the second period," said Howell. "Then I thought we'd finally wilt in the third period but after we got that second goal we were in total command."

The Swedish team, which finished second to Czechoslovakia in last year's world championship in Vienna, has been roundly criticized in the press here after scoring one goal in lopsided losses to the Soviets and then being soundly beaten by the Canadians only two days after Team Canada '78 was assembled.

"The Swedes came out with something to prove," said Howell. "I knew they'd be flying tonight and so did all our players."

They clearly outplayed the Canadians even after Tim Young put Canada ahead 1-0 with an unassisted goal in the first minute of the second period.

What frustrated the Swedes time and again was the fine goaltending of Denis Herron and Dan Bouchard and the strong penalty killing of Jean Pronovost and Pat Hickey.

Finally the roof fell in on goalkeeper Hardy Astrom who had so little work in the Swedish net that he must have been rusty. Hickey found himself in the clear on a pass from Marcel Dionne and made it 2-0 at 13:51 of the third period, Dennis Maruk scored on a breakaway pass from Rick Hampton 18 seconds later, and Hampton ended the scoring at 19:04 converting a pass from Bob MacMillan who did not get credit for an assist.

Canada was outshot 38-20 and that was a fairly accurate reflection of the play. But Herron, who played the first 35 minutes, and Bouchard, who finished up, were just too sharp.

Just how good the Canadian team is won't be known until Czechoslovakia where the world championship starts next Wednesday. Two wins over Sweden may be misleading because the Swedes are obviously a club with problems.

The Canadians leave today for Prague and weekend exhibitions against the Czechoslovakian B and A teams which may shed further light on Team Canada's strength.

Octopi Time In Olympia Once Again

By The Associated Press

Those Montreal Canadiens who do not wear helmets might be well advised to keep them handy as their National Hockey League quarter-final playoff series continues tonight against Detroit Red Wings.

It's not a matter of stepped-up body contact or protection against flying sticks and pucks.

It's a simple matter of practicality, because games three and four in the best-of-seven series will be played at the Olympia, where the fans salute their heroes not with confetti, not with streamers . . . but with occasional showers of octopi.

"I don't think of them as anything other than an identification of the fact that the playoffs are near and that we're in them," said Ted Lindsay, the first Detroit general manager in eight years able to talk about the playoffs and the Red Wings in the same sentence.

"They never hit anybody or anything like that," said Lindsay, who played in Detroit for a dozen seasons and thus has ducked his share of eight-legged creatures hurtling through the air.

"Marcel Pronovost said he used to take them home and cook them, but I, uh, well, I never believed him."

Pronovost has other things on his mind right now, since the former defenceman coaches Buffalo Sabres, who trail Philadelphia Flyers 2-0 in their quarter-final matchup. That series continues at Buffalo on Saturday night.

In action tonight, New York Islanders take their 2-0 lead to Toronto against the Maple Leafs and Boston Bruins bring their 2-0 lead to Chicago against the Black Hawks.

(Tonight's Montreal-Detroit game will be telecast on channels 2 and 6, starting at 4:30).

While those teams are going at it, the Canadiens and Red Wings will snap the 1-1 tie produced by Montreal's 6-2 victory in the opener and Detroit's surprising 4-2 triumph Wednesday night.

It should be noted that at the last Wings home playoff game, against Atlanta Flames, an informal count totalled 11 octopi being scraped off the Olympia surface.

"I wonder if the guy was saving them all the years we didn't make the playoffs?" mused Lindsay, who added the creatures "never cause much of a delay—not the kind that could turn a game around.

"They never squished or squashed or anything. A guy came out with a shovel and picked them up and that was that."

Budd Lynch, the Wings publicity director, claims the airborne seafood is a tradition that dates back to the 1950s.

"It was started by the Cusmano brothers," he recalled. "They owned a restaurant and a grocery store.

"There's all kinds of versions of how it got started. The most popular says it came when the Wings won a semi-final in four straight games and a final in four straight games and one of the Cusmano brothers said, 'They won eight games and an octopus has eight tentacles,' or something like that.'

Quebec Grabs Series Lead

QUEBEC (CP) — Coach Maurice Filion of Quebec Nordiques said Thursday his team's 5-1 victory over Houston Aeros proves that the quarter-final series between them is "far from over."

The win gave Quebec a 2-1 lead in the World Hockey Association series, which opened in Houston last week with a victory for the Aeros. But Quebec came back in overtime to take the second game and tie the affair.

Houston coach Bill Dineen says his team "will have to tighten up defensively and hope for the breaks."

Dineen said that he thought his team played well in the first and third periods Thursday but made a few mistakes. He also had words of praise for Quebec netminder Richard Brodeur, whom he called "a great goaltender."

Quebec goals were scored by Steve Sutherland, Marc Tardif, Normand Dube, Francois Lacombe and Real Cloutier, in what coach Filion termed "a team effort."

Brodeur's shutout was spoiled by Houston's John Hughes in the second half of the third period. Hughes let go a slapshot from the blueline to beat Brodeur, who was partially screened.

Hughes thought Houston played well in the first period and was hopeful the Aeros could turn the series around.

Filion felt that the key to his team's successful effort was the matching of Quebec's checking line with Houston's scoring line.

"I was very pleased with what I saw," Filion said, promising the fourth encounter of the series would feature "hard hitting and close checking."

Bosox Belt Milwaukee

By The Associated Press

When Milwaukee Brewers opened the American League baseball season by battering Baltimore for 40 runs in three games, manager George Bamberger, who spent 10 seasons in an Orioles uniform, said: "things could be worse—I could still be their pitching coach."

Bamberger was singing a different tune Thursday after the Brewers received a taste of their own medicine.

"They wiped us out and I just want to get out of here," he said after Boston Red Sox bombed the Brewers 10-4 with a 16-hit attack and scored 26 runs in sweeping a three-game series at Boston's Fenway Park.

"They're the best hitting team in the league," Bamberger said.

That was the only American League game played since New York-Toronto and Detroit-Cleveland were rained out. In the National League, Los Angeles Dodgers defeated Houston Astros 5-1 and San Diego Padres blanked Atlanta Braves 2-0 while St. Louis-Pittsburgh and Montreal-Chicago were washed out.

Butch Hobson, called "the best No. 9 hitter in baseball" by Texas manager Billy Hunter, hit a three-run homer and Fred Lynn, who had four hits, lined a two-run shot in the third as the Red Sox breezed to their seventh consecutive victory and a 6-0 home record behind Bill Lee's seven-hitter.

"Hobson and Lynn certainly are hitting the ball, but so is everybody," said manager Don Zimmer. "It doesn't surprise me in the least. I knew we could hit the ball. Seeing Lynn get four hits, Butch a long homer, Carlton Fisk and Jerry Remy get three hits apiece and others drill the ball doesn't surprise me."

Virtually overlooked was Carl Yastrzemski's 2,735th career hit, a fourth-inning double that moved him into a tie with Goose Goslin for 32nd place on baseball's all-time hit parade. With 936 extra-base hits, Yastrzemski is 20th, two behind Eddie Mathews.

FOR THIS PLAYER. . .

It's All Milk And Honey

HOUSTON (AP) — "This," said Gary Player, "is a tour of milk and honey."

Player wasn't referring solely to the seven-shot rallies that brought him titles in the Masters and Tournament of Champions in his last two starts, nor to the eight-under-par 64 that gave him the first-round lead Thursday in the $200,000 Houston Open golf tournament.

The 42-year-old South African was talking about the entire Professional Golfers' Association.

"It's the greatest in the world," said Player, who annually competes on five continents and has claimed 113 titles around the world.

"Everything is done to perfection here—the administration, the greens keepers—everything. If you want a ruling, there's a man there to handle it. The courses are prepared better than any place in the world. This is the top of the game.

"Truly, it is a tour of milk and honey. It is a thrill to me to play on courses as well prepared as this."

He wasn't alone. The beautifully-conditioned, 6,997-yard Woodlands Country Club layout combined with some ideal playing conditions—a warm, windless Texas spring day—to produce some of the lowest scores of the season.

Trailing Player by a single shot was Australian Bob Shearer, whose 65 marked the best round of his two-season American career. With those two in the lead, it was the 10th time in the last 13 rounds on the American tour that foreign players had led or shared the lead.

PGA champion Lanny Wadkins and Bob Murphy were another shot back at 66.

Knicks' Captain 'Scared'

NEW YORK (AP) — Earl Monroe, captain of New York Knicks and a veteran of 11 National Basketball Association seasons, was afraid to open his eyes.

"I thought my eyeball had fallen out," said Monroe. "I opened my eyes and I couldn't see a thing. It was all black."

Monroe sat in his team's dressing room at Madison Square Garden on Thursday and spoke slowly about the injury which limited him to seven points and 20 minutes of playing time in the Knicks 137-126 quarter-final playoff loss to Philadelphia '76ers.

Philadelphia leads the best-of-seven series, which resumes here Sunday, 3-0.

"It was very frightening," the six-foot-three guard said. "There's no way to describe it. I opened my eyes and couldn't see anything. I was scared."

Monroe's right eye was a deep crimson after being poked twice during the roughly-played contest.

The first came with 6:44 to play in the first quarter while Monroe was scrambling for a loose ball with team-mate Jim McMillian and Philadelphia guard Henry Bibby. He was helped to the dressing room for treatment, but returned to the Knicks bench early in the second quarter and drew a standing ovation from the sellout crowd of 18,697.

Then, with 4:23 to go in the game, Philadelphia's six-foot-eight, 235-pound George McGinnis was trying to intercept a pass and poked the same eye.

Monroe actually made one of the two free throws he was awarded for the foul by McGinnis, but by the time it was all over he looked like he had run a gauntlet.

Reserve guard Lloyd Free of Philadelphia scored 18 of his 29 points in the fourth quarter to lead the '76ers to victory while Julius Erving and McGinnis also had 29 points each.

Bob McAdoo led the Knicks with 29 and Spencer Haywood added 20.

Cool Spring Weather Supresses Fishing

Wind, rain and cool temperatures combined earlier this week to dampen fishing activity for both salmon and trout around Vancouver Island.

But a little warm weather could set things right in a hurry.

John Groves hit into some good chinook fishing Sunday off Secretary Island at Sooke. He landed a 20-pounder while trolling "fairly shallow" with a minnow.

Several limit catches were recorded from both shallow and deep waters off Secretary and The Bluffs with bait working better than artificial lures.

Waters from Church Rock to Beechey Head have been yielding chinooks at the 80 to 100-foot depth using strip, minnow, anchovies or blue and white hootchies.

Lynn Shappard boated the heaviest this week — a 25½-pounder off Aldridge Point — on strip. Karen Lecky came close with a 24½-pounder taken off Beechey Head on a minnow. Both were landed at the weekend.

Eric Grubert boated a 26½-pounder while fishing Monday evening with a Squirt off the Pedder Bay kelp bed.

"Lots of blues" as well as fair numbers of chinooks have been taken between the kelp bed and Church Rock and deep lines are necessary to take the larger salmon.

* * *

Halibut are still sparking a little interest in the same area.

Wayne Zabel caught a 145-pounder with 30-pound test line on a rod and reel Saturday off Race Rocks. It took an hour before Zabel managed to get it to the boat.

Numerous blues have also been landed off Trial Island.

Don Norbury appears to be the only fisherman experiencing good luck off Sidney. Reports say he's been landing chinooks to 15:03 in recent days while trolling large strip behind a Roy Smith flasher close to the rocks at Coal Island. Gary Nunn took a 12½-pounder Saturday in the same area using a green and blue hootchie.

Deep Cove waters are producing small chinooks on No. 2 Krippled-K's or hootchies trolled behind an Abe and Al dodger off Wain Rock or near Coal Point.

* * *

Action tapered off Thursday in Brentwood Bay with the arrival of a bunch of sea lions but some chinooks to 12 pounds were caught Tuesday and Wednesday off Bamberton using strip and hootchies.

Chinooks to 15 pounds and a few blues are producing limit catches in Finlayson Arm at all depths. Most terminal gear is working but the articifical lures appear to be outfishing bait.

Further up-Island, salmon fishing has tapered off between Duncan and Crofton because of sea lions and killer whales moving through the vicinity.

Blueback fishing continues to be good off Nanaimo and some chinooks in the 12 to 15 pound range started to show up Monday close to Big Finger Island.

The only other bright spot for salmon fishing has been Campbell River.

Blues are coming in from Brown's Bay, Deepwater Bay and The Narrows while bucktailers fishing Willow Point waters brought back six chinooks over 20 pounds Monday.

* * *

Trout anglers are only managing to find mediocre success in a few Island lakes and streams because of the chilly weather.

A few trout have been taken in the Cowichan River as well as Cowichan, Brannan, Westwood and Middle Quinsam lakes.

Rocks Acquire Goalie

Victoria Shamrocks have signed a new goaltender.

Scott Marshall, who has been playing for Fergus Thistles in the Ontario Senior League, arrived Thursday to join the Western Lacrosse Association squad.

The 22-year-old Marshall, who stands five-eleven and weighs in at 180 pounds, played his junior years with Bramalea and was with Elora Mohawks when they won the Canadian junior "B" championship.

Marshall joins holdover netminders Larry Smelzer and George Grover as the Irish move practice sessions from Pearkes to Memorial Arena.

Shamrocks open their league schedule May 3 at Memorial.

Thorburn Continues Hot Streak

SHEFFIELD, England (Reuter-CP) — Canadian champion Cliff Thorburn, a native of Victoria who now plays out Toronto, took a 6-2 lead over Australian Eddie Charlton in the opening quarter-final match at the World professional snooker championships Thursday.

Thorburn, a finalist here last year, continued his impressive shooting when he won five straight after losing the first game.

John Spencer of England, the man who defeated Thorburn in last year's final, was upset 13-8 in a first-round match by South African Perrie Mans.

Four Hours of Value For New Power-Boaters

The Victoria Power Squadron, always in the forefront of promoting boat safety, is holding a special four-hour session for new boat-owners on Tuesday evening at the Spectrum senior secondary school.

Giving the squadron a hand is Rod Andrews of CJVI's Sea Watch.

There is no charge for the 7-11 p.m. training session, which will include displays, safety equipment, correct fuelling procedures, rules of the road and films.

Case Emke says it will be a pretty busy session "but at least they'll have some sea knowledge when they set out."

There are 122 graduates from the squadron's winter night classes on boat-handling who will be able to take to the water with some useful information under their belts.

The annual graduation dinner — also open to all squadron members — will be held at the University of Victoria's Craigdarroch Hall on Friday, May 5. Those intending to be there should contact the squadron's first lieutenant Don Jacobs. His number is 592-6940.

The Royal Victoria Yacht Club will be well represented in the seventh annual Great Equalizer Race, which starts at 5 p.m. tonight off the Shilshore breakwater in Puget Sound.

Sponsored by the Seattle Yacht Club, the course will have three laps of decreasing size for the first time, the long course being 110.5 miles.

Among the boats expected to race under the RVYC burgee are George Cesarec's Galeb, Hugh Porter's Errigal and Greg Oliver's The Distant Drummer.

Forty-two boats turned out for RVYC's annual spring regatta last weekend, the overall winner being Paul Longridge's six-metre Saga. The runner-up was the Soling Piute Logic, owned by Rod Andrews and Rick Parkinson.

After them came Sandy McMillan's Amber Green, Larry Shorter's Kila Kila, The Distant Drummer, Eric Dowell's Shelca, Gerry Howell-Jones' Sian, Jan Olsen's Discretion, George Johnstone's Tarquin and Dick Readshaw's Massilia II.

The club's Laser sailors will have series racing again on Saturday. Start time is 1:30 p.m.

The Canoe Bay Sailing Club will hold its annual invitational single-handed race on Saturday, beginning in the vicinity of the government wharf at Sidney at 11 a.m. There is no registration fee. To get in the rafe give Peter White a ring at 656-1613.

A prizegiving will be held in the Sidney Hotel on completion of the race. A perpetual trophy and six prizes are up for grabs.

There were 40 boats in last Sunday's 18-mile Zero Rock Race which was won by John Barker's Interlude. She edged out Daryl Foster's Tzonqua, Jim Morris' Madeline, Bill Sargent's Southern Comfort, Ken Harrison's Inertia, Don Maness' Vacilando, Cam Thomson's Cal-Lori, Gordie Martman's Sunshine, Ken Brown's Vahevala and Roy Shepherd's Lorikeet.

Soren Isbrand's Soling Danish Pastry won top honors in the year's series racing recently completed by the Turkey Head Sailing Association. Next after the new champion come Jack Foster's Sly Fox, The Distant Drummer, Gerry Porter's Sunshine, Kila Kila, Ted Trenholme's Impatience, Saga, Glen Higgins' Freeway, John Edwards' Scimitar and John Dewey's Shuttlecock.

* * *

Getting ready for another season of racing, the Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association, launched their fleet of Sailerettes on Wednesday. The squadron's centreboarders will have A series racing on Sunday. Things get under way at 10 a.m.

Victoria's Catalina 27 fleet has completed its four-race spring series, the winner being Bill Mottram's Maple Sea. Runners-up were Geoff Buck's Buckshot and Jim Williams' Achilles.

The Victoria Canoe Club is staging an afternoon of fun and novelty races at Thetis Lake on Sunday which could prove as entertaining for spectators as competitors.

Get Tough
If you want to win your annual war against sneaky bugs and filthy weeds, Chipman suggests you stop pussy-footing around. And start getting tough. Use Chipman's tough garden care products—the ultimate solution in the war on bugs, weeds and plant disease.
DUTOX® Insecticide
Aphids. Mites. Leaf Miners. Caterpillars. Spruce budworms. You may not recognise them on sight, but chances are you are familiar with the damage they cause to flowers, shrubs and small trees. The answer is DUTOX systemic insecticide spray that kills bugs on contact. It is also absorbed by the plant to kill sucking and chewing insects that feed on its juices.
SYS-TEM® 2-E Insect Control
If the leaves of your birch trees turn brown in early summer, chances are, birch leaf miners are the culprits. You can easily solve this problem in early spring at bud burst, by painting a band around the trunk with SYS-TEM 2-E. The insecticide is then absorbed and carried to the leaves to kill these destructive leaf miners. SYS-TEM 2-E is also effective as a spray against a host of other pests on ornamentals. Contains Dimethoate.
WEEDRITE® Grass and Weed Control
Everything has its place. But unwanted weeds and grasses have no place on your patio, along your driveway, fence lines and sidewalks. So get tough with WEEDRITE. This unique, granular weedkiller is dissolved in water and applied with a watering can. Kills all unwanted green growth on contact. It can also be safely used around trees, shrubs and ornamentals as it becomes completely deactivated on contact with the soil and is therefore harmless to plant roots.
LAWN WEEDKILLER®
A KILLEX* liquid formulation that controls dandelions, plantains, chickweed, clover, ragweed and other pesky lawn invaders. Two tablespoons in a gallon of water sprays 250 sq. ft. of lawn.

Pierre Unbeatable In His Own Riding

By PAUL WHITELAW
Times Ottawa Bureau

MONTREAL—Like any other MP seeking re-election, Pierre Trudeau returned to his riding Thursday night and reminded the voters that the door of his Mt. Royal constituency office is always open if anyone has "a problem."

Then he paused during a question-and-answer session that attracted a standing-room crowd of about 600, turned to the president of the riding's Liberal association, and asked: "What's the address again?"

It would have been a deadly faux pas for any other politician returning home from Ottawa. But the crowd laughed, of course. Then applauded enthusiastically — as they did repeatedly during the 90-minute appearance of their MP, the Prime Minister.

"I don't write a lot of letters," Trudeau noted, explaining the memory lapse. But he said he felt the riding had been well-served by its MP, despite constraints on his time.

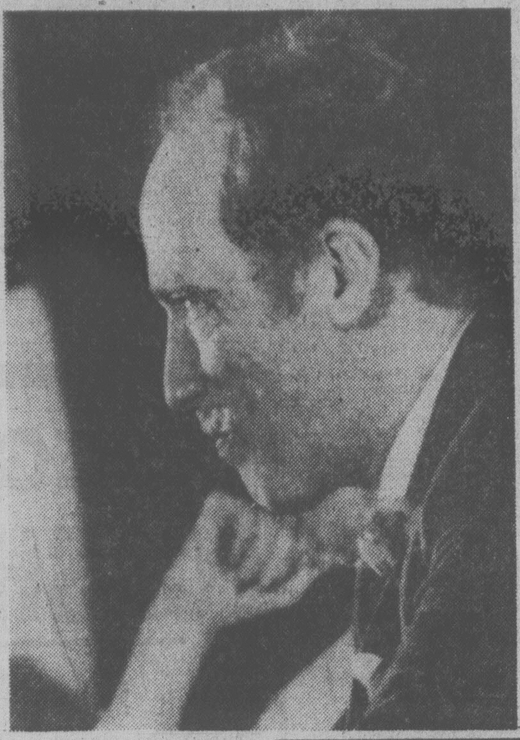
Trudeau, to be sure, didn't have to appologize. He is unbeatable in Mt. Royal, having won the seat by a margin of some 32,000 votes in 1974. As one local Liberal quipped to a reporter: "It would be easier to unseat John Diefenbaker in Prince Albert."

If the question-and-answer session resembled a "bear pit" encounter in any way, it was one where the questioners were tame Pandas rather than angry Grizzlies.

The locale was the Town Hall of Mt. Royal, a wealthy, predominantly English-speaking Montreal suburb that encompasses about 45 per cent of the voters in Trudeau's riding. The constituency extends to the west and south to take in parts of middle class Snowdon district and Cote St. Luc, another suburb that is largely Jewish and "Anglophone." Only about a third of the riding's residents list French as their mother tongue.

If there were any doubt about Trudeau's popularity in the riding, businessman Lou Ziegler pointed out one of the advantages of having the Prime Minister as MP: a voice that carries weight in Ottawa.

Pierre Trudeau, concerned local MP, may face a tough election fight—but hardly in Mt. Royal. A microcosm of Canada it is not.



SUPPORT seemed to come to Prime Minister Trudeau from unexpected source Thursday when photographer caught him in smiling pose with someone else's arm apparently holding up his chin. Actually the arm belongs to Dahlia Wood, president of the Mount Royal riding association.

ALL NATIONALISM NOT BAD - PM

MONTREAL (CP) — Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau said Thursday he agrees with Quebec Liberal leader Claude Ryan that nationalism is not all bad. But nationalism does not necessarily imply the existence of nation states, he added.

"There is some good nationalism and some bad nationalism," Trudeau told a crowd of about 700 on a rare visit to his riding.

"It is not the idea of nations that is retrograde but the idea that nations must necessarily be sovereign. If you want to define yourselves as a nation in the sociological sense, you can."

Trudeau's comments on the election-style swing through his riding came on the 10th anniversary of his swearing in.

Long an opponent of Quebec nationalism, Trudeau said he has "no objection to French Canadians defining themselves as a nation" in the cultural sense, adding that he agrees with Ryan "we should support good nationalism but be against bad nationalism."

PM: Reform Up to People

(FP) — Prime Minister Trudeau wants the citizens of Canada to do a job that he and the provincial premiers have failed at and that debate in the House of Commons has not resolved.

The people should decide what direction constitutional reform should take, Trudeau told reporters Thursday at his weekly press conference.

But he refused to say if the Liberals' constitutional package, promised in the Speech from the Throne in October, would be introduced as legislation before Parliament is dissolved for a general election, or sprung as an election proposal by the Liberal Party during the campaign.

The prime minister said he has heard both positions argued in an out of caucus. Either way, he left the impression that he wants some kind of mandate for constitutional reform if his government is re-elected.

He blamed opposition tactics in the Commons for the government's inability to introduce the promised constitutional package. Trudeau said that in any event the Speech from the Throne clearly indicated that constitutional reform was secondary to ecnomic measures the government wanted to introduce in this session.

NOOSE ISSUE 'IS SETTLED'

OTTAWA (FP) — Prime Minister Trudeau may have alienated millions of Canadians who believe capital punishment should be brought back, with answers he gave Thursday at his weekly press conference.

"As far as I am concerned the issue is settled and I don't plan to re-open it," Trudeau said. He was referring to the free vote taken by the House of Commons a year and a half ago that resulted in capital punishment being removed from the criminal code.

Trudeau said the issue was debated in Parliament for ten years before the vote was taken that finally abolished capital punishment.

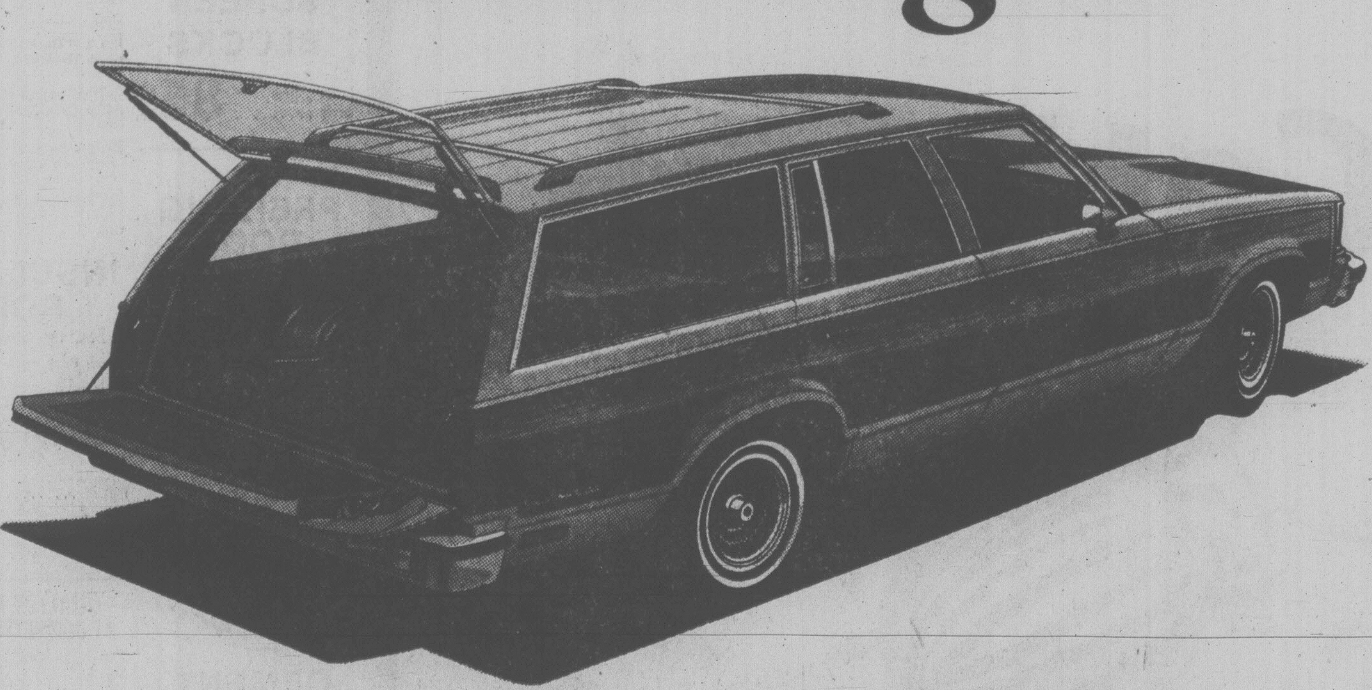
An open and shut case for Malibu Wagon.



When we designed the new Malibu Wagon, we did more than make it smaller and lighter. We opened up the back in a whole new way. A new two-piece tailgate means that even if someone is parked up to your bumper, you can still open the top half to load or unload. A 4' x 8' piece of plywood, or any extra-long object is easily carried without lowering the tailgate. For shorter loads, you can use the bottom half of the tailgate as a loading platform, and use the top half to keep out of the weather if you're loading on a stormy day.

Go ahead, keep loading. The Malibu Wagon may deceive you with its smaller look but it has a generous 72.4 cubic feet of cargo space plus standard storage compartments on both sides and under the floor.

Want more practicality? A compact V-6 engine with available automatic transmission that delivers 37 km/gal. city, 51 km/gal. highway, 42 km/gal. combined based on approved Transport Canada test methods. (Remember these fuel economy figures are estimates which may be subject to revision. The actual fuel economy you get will vary depending on the driving you do, your driving habits, your car's condition, and available equipment.)

The dashboard is divided into functional sections for easy servicing. The two-level power ventilation system delivers cool air at face level, warm air to your feet. It combines with rear vent windows that swing open to draw fresh air through the wagon, even when stopped.

For all its practicality, Malibu Wagon holds its own in comfort and style. A roomy passenger area combines with special sound-absorbing insulation for a quiet, comfortable ride. In engineering, styling, roominess and efficiency, Malibu can offer the resale value people traditionally look for in GM cars.

These are just some of the reasons why we believe Malibu Wagon should be your next wagon. Discover the others in a test drive. Case closed.

Dollar Drop A Bonanza For Some

NEW YORK (UPI) — Americans abroad might be having a hard time stretching their weakened dollars, but for some Japanese businessmen in the United States the dollar's decline has meant bigger paychecks and shopping sprees for their wives.

For instance, when Masao Makuta came to the United States last November to represent a Japanese elevator sales company in New Jersey, his firm exchanged the yen paid employees at the rate of 260 yen to the dollar.

"But it was lowered to 240 yen in February, and there is a move to make it even closer to the actual exchange rate," Makuta said.

Because his salary is figured in yen, it buys more and more dollars as the exchange rate for the U.S. currency declines.

The dollar now is trading around 219 yen in Tokyo, off sharply from the 308 rate of December, 1971.

"While the dollar's decline is good for me personally," Makuta said, "I have mixed feelings when I consider my business. The yen's rise reduces the international competitiveness of our products."

Not all Japanese working here are as lucky as Makuta, however.

Another young Japanese businessman in New York said while part of his monthly salary is quoted in yen, his company, so far, still maintains its own exchange rate of around 280 yen to the dollar. "Thus my salary has never changed in spite of the yen's rise," he said.

"We're demanding a change in the rate," this businessman said, "but the company seems to have no plans to lower it. Next time, I would ask them to remit my salary to my bank account in Tokyo and have it transferred to my New York bank account at the actual market rate by my brother. This way, I surely can get more money."

An official at the Japanese Consulate-General in New York said diplomats' salaries, quoted in yen, are remitted at the actual exchange rate.

"But in light of the current exchange situation, it has become certain that salaries in yen will be cut to leave the dollar amount unchanged."

Kenji Katayama, employed by a Japanese ceramics importing firm in New Jersey, said his salary is quoted in dollars so the soaring yen "regrettably" had no good effect on his income.

Although the company's sales are increasing, the dollar's plunge has its impact on profits, he said. "If the yen continues to rise further, we will have to raise prices."

A worker for a Japanese camera maker said his wife is concerned about the weakening dollar because her savings in an American bank account are losing value.

"She is hoping the dollar will recover before we return home," he said.

Other women expressed similar views and some said they were planning to go on shopping sprees.

Michiko Matsumoto, living in New Jersey, said she had lost about 70 yen per dollar since she bought a dollar for around 290 yen when she came to the United States a little more than a year ago.

"The money I brought here from Japan dropped sharply in value. Had I known beforehand that the yen would go that high, I would have left as much money in Tokyo as possible," she said.

For instance, if she bought $3,000 for 870,000 yen when coming to the United States and returned home now with the same amount of dollars, she would lose as much as 210,000 yen in exchange. The $3,000 now would buy only 660,000 yen in Tokyo.

Mrs. Matsumoto and other housewives said they would use a good portion of their savings to buy American goods, such as gems and designer handbags which might be more expensive in Japan, rather than return home with the devalued dollar.

Highway Finished Across Laos

BANGKOK (AP) — The 300-kilometre China-Laos Friendship Highway connecting Luang Prabang, the former Laotian royal capital, and southern China has been completed, the official Laotian news agency KPL reports. The new stretch of Highway 1 also connects Luang Prabang with an 800-kilometre road network the Chinese have been building in northern Laos for the last 10 years.

Bonus a Problem

TEHRAN (AP) — Power Minister Taghi Tavakoli says about one million foreigners are working in Iran on the country's $60-billion development program, causing some dissension among Iranians who want equal pay. Tavakoli said the skilled foreigners are necessary and must have incentives to come to Iran.

SEA CHARTING DANGERS SEEN

The simpler needs of Third World nations are in danger of being overlooked by the industrialized countries who have sophisticated ocean-charting techniques, Canadian hydrographers were told Thursday.

Rear-Admiral G.S. Ritchie, president of the International Hydrographic Bureau directing committee in Monaco, was final speaker at the 17th annual conference of the Canadian Hydrographers Association and Canadian Hydrographic Service, at a luncheon at Princess Mary restaurant.

Ritchie, a retired Royal Navy hydrographer, warned of dangers that may hinder hydrographic advances on the broadest international front.

"We who are already in the hydrographic business must do everything in our power in the years ahead to bring about world-wide understanding of the urgent need for hydrographic expansion on the broadest front," Ritchie said.

Countries with no hydrographic capability may soon have vast ocean territories as a result of the Law of the Sea Conference and the expected International Seabed Authority. In some cases, he said, the sea zones will exceed the land held by smaller nations.

But the "first league" hydrographic nations, in their struggle to perfect ways of making a navigational chart more simply, might forget that emerging economies may be starting hydrographic services from scratch and need help developing simple echo-sounding and electronic fixing of positions.

"These people are our sailing companions on the voyage towards the broad new horizons, and only if we sail together shall we arrive at our desired destination beyond those broad horizons," Ritchie said.

Beauty Queen To Face Trial, Friend Says

LONDON — Former American beauty queen Joyce McKinney, believed to have fled to Canada and then the United States after jumping bail in Britain, will return to face trial, one of her actor friends said Thursday.

Ronald Farebrother said Miss McKinney told him before leaving, "Make sure you tell everyone I'm not running away from the Old Bailey (courthouse). I will be appearing in court."

Farebrother told reporters he met Miss McKinney at a store near the home she rented while awaiting her May 3 trial.

"She said she was not running away from her trial, but from her house where she felt like a prisoner," he said.

Farebrother said, "I think she will make a sudden and dramatic appearance before the trial, just like the actress she is."

Army Goal $180,000

Test-Tube Baby Near?

LONDON (Reuter) — Two British physicians reported to have perfected a "test-tube baby" technique will publish their research shortly, a spokesman for one of them said today.

The two, in hiding after a tabloid Daily Mirror story headlined Miracle Birth Will Take Place In July, refused to confirm or deny the reports.

A spokesman for Dr. Patrick Steptoe, a gynecologist, said a news conference will be held soon and the research published in scientific magazines.

Dr. Steptoe, senior consultant at Oldham General Hospital in northern England, and Dr. Robert Edwards of Cambridge University have been working for years to fertilize a human egg outside the mother and reinsert it, leading to a normal birth.

The process would allow women with faults in their fallopian tubes to conceive. "But it's hardly a test-tube baby," commented Prof. Charles Douglas, head of Cambridge University's department of obstetrics.

In this technique the egg is removed shortly after ovulation, fertilized with sperm in a test tube and implanted into the womb after seven days.

"I think they have almost got the problems solved; but whether the first baby will be tomorrow or in 10 years I don't know," Prof. Douglas said.

Dr. Steptoe and Dr. Edwards have announced breakthroughs with some regularity in the past. In 1970, Dr. Steptoe predicted the first implant "fairly soon" and in 1976 they wrote in the medical journal, Lancet, that a woman had carried such an implanted fetus for 10 weeks before it died.

The Mirror said several other women, besides the one who would give birth in Oldham Hospital in July, carried babies conceived in test tubes.

Atom Plant Raked

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Ralph Nader organization claims officials of the Trojan nuclear power plant in Oregon tried to "trivialize" an April 5 accident that exposed two technicians to the largest overdose of radiation ever experienced by an atomic power plant worker.

Dr. Sidney Wolfe, director of Nader's HELP research group, and Richard Pollock, director of the Critical Mass Energy Project, said the workers may have received enough radiation to cause cancer.

In a letter to the Nuclear Regulatory Commission Thursday, Wolfe and Pollock urged the government to impose heavy fines on Portland General Electric and its two senior officials and to take strong action to assure the Trojan plant will not suffer similar mishaps in the future.

Pollock and Wolfe said the two technicians were exposed to between 14 and 17 rems of radiation — 4.6 to 5.6 times the maximum quarterly dose allowed under federal standards — when a spent fuel rod was passed through a refueling room while the technicians were carrying out a planned examination of the room.

"Their exposure — according to an NRC official we spoke to — is the largest ever received by an atomic power plant worker," the letter said.

The letter said Ron Cathren, a Portland General health physicist, tried to minimize the significance of the exposure by saying the men would get the same amount of radiation from an X-ray of the upper and lower gastrointestinal tract and that the exposure "is below the level where biological effects can be detected."

"Both statements are false and misleading," the letter said. "The average whole-body dose a patient gets from upper and lower gastrointestinal X-rays is about one rem or about one-fifteenth as much as these two workers received."

POLICE PLUGGING DRIVE AGAINST MS

Greater Victoria police are hoping to double contributions to the 1978 Multiple Sclerosis Society campaign May 12-13 with the help of senior secondary school students.

Policemen in Victoria, Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt departments are engaging for the second year in the MS carnation day project which raised some $8,000 a year ago.

Saanich Const. Lawrence Knox, co-ordinator of the project, said presentations are being made in the senior secondary schools and it is hoped up to 300 volunteers will help uniformed, off-duty police on the project in the downtown area and at shopping centres.

A street banner will read: Support Your Local Police — Fight MS.

The canvass will run from 6 to 10 p.m. on May 12 and all the following day.

Proceeds of the drive will be spent on MS research.

Little is known about the disease which strikes mostly young adults. It affects the central nervous system for reasons unknown.

BETS HEDGED

VANCOUVER (CP) — The motive behind Grouse Mountain Resorts Ltd.'s bid to buy a Calgary oil and gas company is to offset ski losses in snowless seasons with an active business that isn't subject to the vagaries of weather, president John Hoegg told the company's annual meeting Thursday.

The company announced last week that it has signed a letter of intent to acquire a private and unnamed company. The deal is scheduled to close May 15.

Because of a lack of snow during the past two ski seasons — its main source of revenue — Grouse is in a cash squeeze, he said. Interest on its debt alone amounts to $2,000 a day.

Chile Releases Begin

SANTIAGO (AP) — Fifty persons among those granted amnesty from military court prison sentences invoked since the 1973 overthrow of the Salvador Allende government, were released Thursday.

The government declared the general amnesty Wednesday for about 1,200 persons now in exile who were convicted of politically related crimes and about 280 serving prison terms in Chile. Those in exile must ask government permission to return home.

Persons convicted of murder, fraud and robbery were excluded from the amnesty.

The amnesty, signed by President Augusto Pinochet, refers to persons condemned in connection with the state of siege from the Sept. 11, 1973, overthrow to March 11, 1978.

The action was the latest in a series of measures by Pinochet to ease rigid rule in Chile. Restrictions continue on labor freedom and the press.

The new Chilean cabinet, for the first time with a majority of civilian ministers, was sworn into office Thursday. It has 11 civilians and six military officers. The outgoing cabinet had nine military personnel and seven civilians.

Pinochet has said selection of a new cabinet with civilian majority is a step toward a "new institutionality." The president said there will not be a return to "formal and presumptuous democracy," adding that this "would betray the Chilean people."

NOTHING PEDESTRIAN about these shoes, currently displayed at New York's Museum of Contemporary Crafts in The Great American Foot show. The spiked tennis shoes were designed by Judith Auda of San Francisco, while the alligator pumps, clutching a cigarette butt, are by E'wao Kagoshima of New York. Not the sort of styles to wear to a garden party.

Whittle Away those Evenings

THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS®

. . . it tells you how

In the following article, Mother Earth reader David Vanderzwaag tells of a fun — yet practical — way to kill some of your spare time.

Although old man winter has supposedly left for the year, there are a lot of days (and evenings) when it still isn't fit to venture outside. The next time you're fidgeting in front of the fireplace waiting for the weather to break, why not treat your hands to some productive enjoyment by whittling out a birch broom?

All's you'll need to help revive a vanishing craft, save a few bucks and create that king-sized broom you've always wanted for those really tough cleanup jobs (such as sweeping out the stable or clearing the driveway) is a penknife, a birch sapling and a little patience.

First, find a straight birch sapling (about three inches thick and approximately five feet long) with as few knots as possible. Then remove the bark from the shoot's entire length.

Next, use an ordinary penknife to peel back several thin, 12- to 15-inch long strips of wood at one end of the stick. The finer you make these strips, the finer your finished product will be.

Continue to whittle back dozens of strips around the pole until only a small center "core" is left. Saw this core off and fasten several bands of fine wire, twine or cord around its bristles.

Finally, whittle the remainder of the handle to fit your hands (or your whim) and sand the surface smooth.

Like rug making, broom whittling was a yearly chore on many pioneer homesteads. According to one old farm journal that I've read, "splint brooms" (as these implements were known) can be made of maple, ash or ironwood as well as birch. Perhaps they can be fashioned from other types of wood, too, but I don't know.

One thing I do know, though, is thanks to their stout wooden "bristles," these heavy-duty sweepers are ideal for such outdoor chores as brushing out a toolshed or stable, or clearing lawns and paths of leaves, snow, papers, etc.

The only problem with these hand-crafted beauties is that after you've put several hours' worth of creative energy into making one, you may never want to let the finished broom touch a grimy floor!

Early Diagnosis Of Deafness

My four-month-old child doesn't seem to respond to loud noises. I am concerned that he may have some form of deafness. How early can this be determined? — Mrs. S.R.T.

Dear Mrs. T.:

There now are a great number of highly sophisticated electronic and computerized techniques which can determine deafness at a very early age.

For a long time the tests that ere available were entirely dependent on a child's ability to recognize sounds and indicate to the examiner that he heard them.

Now these tests can be done by by-passing the "response technique." At the Yale University Medical School these methods are available. Dr. Robert Ruben, Professor of Diseases of Ear, Nose and Throat at the Albert Einstein College of Medicine in New York City also has a highly developed program for the early detection of deafness. It is most imperative that infants who do not respond to loud noises and are suspected of hearing deficiency be tested early so that an active program of rehabilitation can be started without any delay.

* * *

I'm concerned because my son is going to have a hernia operation and the doctor says he will use a spinal anesthesia. He's 32 years old. How safe is this type of anesthesia?—Mrs. C.Y.

Spinal anesthesia is a very safe procedure. Highly-trained anesthetists frequently choose this type of anesthesia for surgery of the lower abdominal cavity, for hernias and for surgery of the lower extremities.

An anesthetic is painlessly injected into the spinal canal. The nerves that radiate from that area are blocked and are freed from pain sensation. There are some advantages to this type of local anesthesia rather than a general anesthesia. There is no need for your concern. You can be sure that your son's doctor and surgeon made this choice for a very specific reason and to further insure his rapid post-operative recovery.

Junk Food Is Hard on the System

caveat emptor

By LYNNE GORDON

Junk food or "empty calorie" food is usually defined by nutritionists as any which is food high in fat, salt or sugar, and which provides a lot of calories but very few other nutrients to go with them. Such food is junk in the sense that it does not provide adequate nourishment.

For example, potato chips are food because they contain a high level of salt and fat. Candies, soft drinks, chocolate bars, doughnuts and packaged cakes and cookies are also usually classified as junk food by nutritionists, although some of them prefer to speak of "empty calorie" or "non-nutritious" food instead of simply calling it junk.

Whatever they call it, some nutritionists say it's best not to eat such foods at all. Others say junk food is not likely to be harmful provided that it has only a small place in a total diet which includes sufficient whole grains, fruits and vegetables in it.

Still other nutritionists told me it would be more useful to speak of junk diets rather than junk foods. They said this would encourage people to look at the sum total of their daily diet instead of looking only at the merits of specific foods.

At any rate, there is agreement among nutritionists that food which is processed into packaged products for the convenience of the buying public loses many of the vitamins, minerals and trace elements which originally were found in the ingredients from which it was made. When you eat processed foods, your body must itself provide the nutrients necessary for the digestion of these foods. The result is a strain on your body which can harm your health.

This is especially true of processed foods which are high in white sugar. When you eat these foods, your body's own reserves of nutrients, including the B vitamins, are depleted in order to digest the refined sugar.

The eating of foods containing large amounts of white sugar also causes your pancreas to work harder than it does when the body is digesting the natural sugar in a food such as fresh fruit.

A pancreas over-worked in this way can create a condition known as hypoglycemia which is rare. This is a lowering of the blood-sugar level in the body and is accompanied by such symptoms as lightheadedness, fatigue, blurred vision, irritability and restlessness.

Ironically, this condition does not stem from a lack of sugar in the daily diet but rather from the body's inability to regulate sugar in a too-highly concentrated form.

Such concentrations of sugar are common in many processed foods. They also occur in natural foods such as honey and dates, and in "health food" cookies made with brown sugar (which is white sugar colored with molasses). Too much of any of these foods can be harmful.

In the case of processed foods which are high in salt, such as potato chips or salted peanuts, an extra burden is placed on the body to secrete the salt through the kidneys. This can lead to high blood pressure and kidney disease.

In the case of junk foods which are high in fat, the molecular structure of the fat has been altered during processing to create a product that no longer resembles anything that nature ever made. This puts an extra strain on the body during digestion.

As well, junk foods have a high content of chemical additives, including food coloring. Some researchers believe additives are the culprit in some cases of hyperactivity and learning disabilities in children.

The actual nourishment value of any food depends on a variety of nutrients which the body requires for the proper digestion of any food. These include vitamins, minerals, amino acids and essential oils. You can get these nutrients by avoiding empty calorie junk foods and including a variety or supplement of whole grains, vegetables and fruit in your daily diet.

These facts which are now known about junk food have prompted the move by school boards, in Montreal and in Toronto, to ban junk food from high school cafeterias in favor of natural, nutritious foods, as part of an educational program which supports healthy eating habits among students.

WISH FULFILLED

AMARILLO, Tex. (AP) — The mayor of Amarillo has fulfilled one of his childhood wishes, but he may have lost a vote from the local high school principal.

Mayor Jerry Hodge, an alumnus of Tascosa High School, returned to the campus Tuesday morning to dedicate a park. The students turned out and the mayor cut the ribbon.

Then, about 11 a.m., Hodge made an announcement he said he had been told not to make. "Class dismissed," the mayor said. With that, the students scattered.

Principal Gerald Nipp said the mayor had no authority to send the students home.

Tell Foster Mom

DEAR ABBY: I am a 15-year-old girl living in a foster home. I don't mind being in a home — the mother is a sweet person and I love her. But the father is not the type of father I would like. I am very big for my age, and sometimes I have problems about it. The father has offered me money to let him touch me, but I have never accepted.

Abby, the reason why I don't tell my foster mother is that I don't want to be sent away from here.

I have asked God to help me, and He does. I'm saved, but I am still afraid of this man. I never let him touch me. I always run into the bathroom and lock the door.

Please tell me how to cope with this without being sent away.

AFRAID

DEAR AFRAID: Please, please, tell your foster mother! I am almost certain you'll not be sent away, but if you are, it would be better than living in your present environment. Your foster father is a sick man and needs to be treated. If you don't tell your foster mother, he could eventually harm you or some other young girl. I beg you to confide in your foster mother today. Write again and let me know how you are. I care.

DEAR ABBY: When I was 19 and in nurses' training, I became pregnant. It was the first and only time I ever went all the way, and I got caught.

The boy offered to marry me, but he wasn't ready for marriage and neither was I, so I said no. I had the baby and gave it up for adoption to a family unknown to me. But I was assured that the child would be loved and well cared for.

My parents stood by me through it all, for which I'll be eternally grateful because I caused them a lot of grief and heartache.

Anyway, I've been a nurse for three years now and have fallen in love with a young doctor. He is so kind and good. I never knew anyone that wonderful could exist. He's asked me to marry him and I want to. But I don't know if I should tell him about my past.

Please advise me. He can't understand why I haven't given him an answer. Thank you.

R.N.

DEAR R.N.: Tell him the truth. If he's as "wonderful" as you say he is, he'll not hold it against you — and if he does, you're ahead to know it up front.

DEAR ABBY: We have a wedding invitation with a smaller card included that reads as follows:

"Mr. and Mrs. ——————
———will attend.

Number of guests —————
—."

The outer envelope was addressed to "Mr. and Mrs. J. Smith," and the inner envelope was the same.

Is it proper to fill in, "Mr. and Mrs. Smith plan to attend, and the number of guests is FIVE?" (This includes our two children and my husband's mother, who makes her home with us.)

I say that since there was only "Mr. and Mrs." on the envelopes, the invitation is for only the two of us.

My husband says that we are allowed as many guests as we wish, and they are asking us to please fill in the number. Who is right?

NUMBER, PLEASE

DEAR NUMBER: You are. Under no circumstances should invited guests include others without the approval of the hostess.

'Tail' of Persistence Saves Slick's Life

OAK PARK, Mich. (AP) — Slick the garter snake is giddy but alive, thanks to his owner who held him by the tail for three hours after Slick slithered down an auto dashboard vent.

"He was halfway into the windshield defrosting vent before I grabbed his tail," said Leonard Schiffman. "If I had let go he would have crawled in further and probably have died."

Slick, though, apparently didn't realize the jam he was in and fought Schiffman's gentle tugs on his tail.

"I couldn't pull too hard or I would injure him," said Schiffman.

Police and gasoline-station attendants also tried their hand, but to no avail. A veterinarian arrived and gave Slick a tranquillizer shot. Schiffman then pulled the limp snake from the vent.

"He's back in his cage now, but he's a little high from the shot," Schiffman said.

Schiffman, a special education teacher in Detroit, said he took the snake to school Monday to show it to his class. He was returning home when Slick slithered into the vent.

When I looked for a place to buy my Amana I found there was no contest there either. McDonald Supply had the knowledgeable microwave sales staff to answer all my questions and helpful services like cooking schools, continuous demonstrations and lots of accessories.

25-Year Jail Sentences Worry Prison Officials

Mandatory 25-year sentences were written into Canadian law with the abolition of hanging, but prison officers, the John Howard Society, and MPs are all predicting havoc in the prisons as the number of long-termers increase.

OTTAWA (CP) — A 24-year-old British Columbia man convicted of first-degree murder this week joins a rapidly growing number of prisoners who must serve a minimum of 25 years in penitentiary with virtually no hope of parole — a matter of concern to some corrections experts.

Walter Murray Madsen, convicted of murdering four teen-agers, is the 45th person to be sentenced to life imprisonment since August, 1976, when the Criminal Code was amended to specify minimum sentences for murder.

Another 87 persons have been convicted of second-degree murder and must serve a minimum of 10 years before becoming eligible for parole.

If these trends continue, in 10 years there will be more than 900 prisoners in penitentiary who have no hope of release for many years.

"There's going to be havoc," says Ward Adams, executive-director of the John Howard Society in Ottawa, a prisoners' aid society.

"When you get all these people together, with no hope of release, there's going to be a horrendous problem."

Taking away the possibility of early parole for murderers was a sop to capital-punishment advocates which the government found politically expedient when it abolished the death penalty, Adams says.

Paul Caouette, union representative for federal prison guards, says: "Escapes, assaults on staff and assaults on inmates definitely have increased since the law (for long sentences) came into effect."

He says if the government wanted to abolish capital punishment, it should have had the courage to do so without making a trade-off which endangers guards' lives.

Capital punishment, reserved for killers of policemen and prison guards, was abolished in 1976 in a free vote in the Commons. The Criminal Code was amended to divide murder into first- and second-degree charges punishable by life imprisonment.

The new law specified the minimum length of time to be served before a prisoner became eligible for parole. First-degree murderers must serve at least 25 years, but can apply for a judicial review after 15 years. Before, prisoners serving life terms were eligible for parole after 10 years.

Although the government has said it has no intention of reopening the capital-punishment debate, many MPs feel this will be an issue in the next election. They say there is increasing public pressure to reinstate hanging for killers of policemen and prison guards.

From 1968 to 1976, only 18 people were convicted of capital murder in Canada, compared with the 45 convicted of first-degree murder in the last 19 months.

The popular wisdom was that juries hesitated to convict, knowing murderers would go to the gallows.

"We kept using that line," says one penitentiaries official. "I wonder if it will come back to haunt us."

He says juries should be just as cautious about sending a man to prison for 25 years.

The new law means the proportion of prisoners serving long sentences is going to rise steadily and this concentration of long-termers disturbs prison guards, who say escapes will increase because prisoners will feel they have nothing to lose.

Solicitor-General Jean-Jacques Blais agrees such prisoners present problems.

"We provide within the system the facilities that he can serve his sentence without damaging himself," Blais said in an interview.

The prison environment has to be changed for this type of prisoners, "if only to prevent his becoming a more dangerous individual than he was at the time he came in."

Blais said the concerns about increased prison violence may be exaggerated and not all murderers are violent.

"Murderers are the most rehabilitable of all criminals," said Mark MacGuigan (L—Windsor-Walkerville) who headed a Commons subcommittee investigating prison conditions. "Many times it's a one-time thing, and they are not likely to commit murder again."

Adams said these are the very reasons why mandatory 25-year terms are not necessary.

"The easiest paroles we (the John Howard Society) have ever had to supervise are people who were in for murder."

Many critics are concerned about the psychological effects of long sentences on prisoners.

In a working paper published in 1975, the Law Reform Commission of Canada said no sentence should be longer than 20 years.

"No sentence of imprisonment should deny hope to the offender."

Keith Jobson, a University of Victoria law professor, says prisoners he has dealt with who have served 20-year terms are "childlike."

"You have to hold their hand all the time. They have lost a sense of judgment about how to make ordinary decisions."

He says the destruction of a prisoner's ability to function as an independent person "is a terrible cost to inflict in the interests of security (of society)."

CIRCUS STILL PULLS

NEW YORK (UPI) — While lions roared, forty would-be show-girls smiled, kicked and cartwheeled across the center ring of the Ringling Bros. and Barnum £ Bailey Circus Wednesday in hopes of being asked to join the Greatest Show on Earth.

When it was all over, two were. Susan Montanye, 26, a New York City waitress and Leslie O'Neil, 20, an actress and a former Rockette from Totowa, N.J., were signed up to dance under the big top for $215 a week.

About 40 auditioners showed up at an almost-empty Madison Square Garden with leotards and dance shoes. After a few warm-ups, circus dance captain Susu Sparkman put them through their paces.

Choreographers Bill Bradley, Jerry Fries and aerialist director Antoinette Concello watched them closely as they kicked and pirouetted.

"What we're looking for here," said Mrs. Concello, "are girls who are nice looking, have nice smiles, pretty legs, good posture and nice personalities.

"I like slender girls — no heavy legs or bottoms because I have to put 'em up in the air," she said.

"They've got be adventurous to go up on the webs," said Bradley. "It takes a lot of guts and hard work, anyone who thinks running away with the circus is the life, is crazy."

But Miss Montayne and Miss O'Neil seem to know what they're in for.

"I've heard circus people are fun people, that they're like a family," said Miss Montanye, a trim blond with a dazzling smile.

"I thought it would be fun working under the lights," said Miss O'Neil. "I've always loved the circus."

The two girls begin training immediately. They will learn the current dance production numbers, aerial tricks, and how to ride the elephants and horses.

And on June 4, when the circus train pulls out of New York for shows in Philadelphia, the Midwest and California, two new additions will pull out with it.

Old Gold. A surprisingly fine Canadian Whisky.

Le Car rolls into Canada.
After proving its economy, durability, and performance to over 1½ million Europeans, Le Car is well on the road to success in Canada.
Standards other cars don't offer as options.
There are lots of reasons why Canadians are making Le Car their car. Le Car comes with front wheel drive, rack and pinion steering, torsion bar suspension and Michelin steel-belted radials, all standard, to tackle those snow covered mountain roads. Rabbit and Civic don't offer you this combination of standard features.
Le Car has more front seat headroom. More rear seat headroom. Even a wider hatch. Yet for all its wide open spaces, Le Car gobbles up a tighter parking space than both Rabbit and Civic.
What good is good mileage if getting there isn't any fun?
Like many small cars, Le Car gets good mileage: 57 mpg (92 km/g) highway,* 40 mpg (64 km/g) city.* But with a wheelbase as long as some bigger cars, and a fully independent suspension, car critics have been driven to praise Le Car for a ride that's exceptionally smooth and stable. Even on the roughest roads.
Other things that contribute to the fun are Le Car's optional sunroof (it's so big, we call it a Fun Roof). And front seats so comfortable, they take a backseat to no other car.
Driving is believing.
There's only one way to experience the fun of Le Car. Visit your nearest Renault dealer and take one for a test drive.
Suffice it to say you'll find returning the car difficult.
Some of the equipment illustrated optional at extra cost.

FREEZE DRIED BURIALS

LONDON (Reuter) — A U.S. inventor has patented a method of freeze-drying bodies as a space-saving device, the New Scientist journal reports.

Patent-holder Philip Backman describes how the deceased are to be cooled in liquid nitrogen to below -100 C. (-150 degrees F.) solidifying all tissue. Next comes the step he calls surface enhancement, which involves pulverizing the iced body into small pieces in a hammer mill.

The tiny milled bits are then freeze dried.

The freeze-dried grains can then be hermetically sealed for burial or domestic storage.

Dollar Dip of 13%: Good Thing or Bad?

TORONTO (UPI) — The Canadian dollar has lost more than 13 per cent against the U.S. dollar during the last 15 months and economists are still unsure if the drop is a good thing — or where it will stop.

In November, 1976, Canadians tourists in the U.S. were enjoying an exchange rate that gave them $1.03 in U.S. currency for every Canadian dollar. By the end of the month that situation changed — possibly forever.

Wednesday, Canadian currency changed hands at 87.08 U.S. cents — nearly 16 cents below its value just 15 months ago — with no assurance it would not go even lower.

The dollar's slide began on Nov. 15, 1976, when the separatist Parti Quebecois, dedicated to seceding Quebec from the 10-province Canadian Confederation, was swept to power in a provincial election.

Almost immediately, traders on the international money marketplace began to quote lower prices for the Canadian dollar, which soon began trading, for the first time since Canada set it free to "float" in 1970, below the value of U.S. currency.

The value of a nation's legal tender is determined on the trading floors of major banks in the world's financial centres where banks, nations and multi-national corporations buy currency they will need for their transactions.

Canada, rich in natural resources but with a weaker industrial base than the U.S. — its chief trading partner and competitor — had maintained a high value on its dollar mainly through its high lending rate.

Because investment capital drew an attractive rate of return in Canada, generally several percentage points above the U.S. rate, the dollar traded at a premium as investors bought Canadian dollars for investment in Canada.

However, economists say that for most of the 1970s, Canadian production fell behind that of the U.S., causing an increase in the price of Canadian manufactured goods, which made exports less attractive to foreign buyers.

Canadians were spending more on foreign travel and imported goods, which brought more Canadian dollars seeking buyers into the marketplace.

The exchange rate plunged nearly five cents in the last half of November, then accelerated in July, 1977, when it broke through the 94-cent (U.S.) mark.

In October, 1977, the dollar plunged again, this time trading below 90 U.S. cents for the first time since the Depression of the 1930s, and has slipped steadily — although with wild fluctuations at times — since then.

In an attempt to slow the decline, the government took out nearly $1 billion in foreign loans, floated a $750 million bond issue and raised its prime lending rate twice in less than a month.

But economists say that a cheaper dollar makes Canada's exports cheaper and more competitive in the world marketplace and, as demand for the goods rises, so will the dollar's value.

Al Pipher, chief money trader for the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, says Canada's trade surplus of $2.9 billion in 1977 was partly attributable to the lower exchange rate but cautions it is nearly impossible to say exactly what effect the cheaper dollar has had on Canada's economic picture.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

Back in 1951, in an article in the Bridge World Magazine, it was stated that "the Italians impressed us very much as a potentially fine team. They lacked the experience that comes with mature age, but when they acquire this, they will be an extremely difficult team to beat."

How prophetic this utterance was is attested to by the number of championships the Italians have won during the past two decades. But before coming of age, they were just another bridge-playing aggregation, as can be evidenced in today's deal. It arose in the 1951 World Championships, in the match between Italy and the United States. In the deal, the Italians were talked out of a grand slam by the American East defender, the late John R. Crawford.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 ♡ (!)	Pass	Pass	Dbl.
Pass	3 NT	Pass	Pass
Pass

Opening lead: Three of ♡.

Crawford's opening one-heart bid was a "psychic" call (defined as "bidding what you don't have, or bluffing, to create the illusion of strength, or to conceal a weakness"). Such bids are seldom made in top-level play, for experience has demonstrated that their employment is suicidal more often than not. But on this day, the psychic bid paid a nice dividend.

South's pass was what is known as a "trap" pass. It was South's hope that East-West would get too high in their bidding, and South could then make a penalty double.

After West had passed and North had made a takeout double, South assumed that North's re-opening double was on the light side; and that Crawford had a minimum opening bid. So South gave up on the possibility of making a slam, and he bid merely three notrump. As is evident, a grand slam was there for the taking.

When the deal was replayed, East passed and the American South player opened with one club, to which North responded one diamond. When South then rebid two notrump, showing 19-20 high-card points, North put the hand in seven notrump, being able to account for practically every high card in the deck.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

"You bought two lots in Kalota?" Susia exclaimed. "I guess that could be a good investment, but why triangles?"

Bert smiled. "I liked them, and they're exactly similar in shape," he told her. "And something else. All sides are perfect squares in kins. The long side of the bigger lot is 8 kins more than double its shortest side, and the short side of the smaller lot is 32 kins less than its middle side."

A strange investment, but what would the dimensions be? Thanks for idea to Ian Parker, Toronto.

Comics Face Ad Controls

WASHINGTON (AP — "Tired of bullies kicking sand in your face?" asks the advertisement picturing a skinny chap standing meekly next to his buxom, bikini-clad companion. "Send for our body building kit."

Or.

"Just $1.25 for sea monkeys. Cute. Easy to train. Includes a full year's supply of sea monkey food. Just add water and you have instant life." What you get are two ugly brine shrimp.

Or.

"Just 99 cents for 200 stamps to start your very own valuable collection." You get the stamps. You get another batch each month and bills for $9 or $10 dollars.

Or.

"Amaze your friends when you shake hands. This buzzer will startle them." It probably will.

Comic books are full of these come-ons and the U.S. Federal Trade Commission (FTC) wants to take a closer look at just what young consumers are getting for their money.

Advertisers spend about $66 million a year to plug their wares in comics. And it's no wonder, says the commission's William Erxleben:

"Between the ages of five and 15 there are 40 million potential buyers. Independent figures show that 82 per cent to 92 per cent of all children between the ages of seven and 11 read comic books.

"And our estimates indicate that for every $1 spent on comic book ads, there are $3 in sales," Erxleben said. "That amounts to a $200-million product industry each year."

He said the commission worries especially about a child's first contact with the "free-enterprise system."

"Children can become very disillusioned with the system and legitimate business should be very concerned," Erxleben said in a telephone interview.

He related a story told by a fellow worker whose daughter had saved for weeks to collect the 95 cents called for by a comic book ad. The pitch was for a machine that would turn plain paper into dollar bills.

"It arrived and the girl put the paper in, turned the crank and nothing happened," Erxleben said. "She hadn't seen the fine print about putting your own dollar in first, then the plain paper. It (the ad admitted there was nothing magic involved."

He said his Seattle regional office will conduct the investigation in the next 18 months and thinks it may have recommendations for the FTC that will "make sure kids are getting a fair shake."

A Little Fling Doesn't Hurt

LONDON (UPI) — One of the things that fascinated film star Grace Kelly when she became Princess Grace of Monaco was the gilded gambling casino that at its height made Monte Carlo the world capital of big gambling.

And one of the most interesting things that emerged from her curiosity, she once told an interviewer, was the discovery that croupiers with years of experience at the roulette and card tables believed a gambler's lucky streak usually lasted no longer than 15 minutes.

Some oil-rich Arabs nearly broke the bank a few years ago in a run that continued long past 15 minutes but on the average the Casino felt, said Her Serene Highness, that if it could hold out for a quarter of an hour or so the odds would begin to turn back towards the bank.

They did very little market research in the days when gambling on the Riviera was basically a pastime of the moneyed classes so no one scientifically tested the truth of this opinion. Times have changed especially in Britain which is the new capital of big stake gaming in Europe.

Legalized gambling, an industry with an annual turnover of more than 7 billion dollars and with more than 90,000 employees, demands the most careful research. So economists and sociologists have been put to work.

The result is a 257-page study turned out by the Home Office. It supervises gambling through local Gaming Boards that operate under rules so strict neither the Mafia nor any other arm of organized crime has ever been able to break into the big gambling casinos despite a turnover last year of $1.3 billion.

The study makes a number of intriguing points in a country where it says four out of five adults gamble at some time or another in the casinos, at the horse and dog tracks, on the football pools or on bingo and lotteries. The most sociologically important is:

"There is little or no evidence to suggest that, as a pastime, moderate gambling has harmful or social consequences either for the gambler or society."

There are some who gamble away everything, of course, just as there are drinkers who become alcoholics. But a majority of gamblers, said the study, do not squander money recklessly either in the amounts they bet or the winnings they spend.

"As far as (football) pools are concerned," it said, "there is evidence that many people budget for their expenditure, that participants both intend to use any large win thriftily and sensibly and in fact do so when that event occurs, spending the money on home-centered items as their first preference.

"In horse race betting, too, small wins are re-bet more often than large ones, while re-betting itself is largely confined to regular punters (bettors)."

The study suggests that the view that gambling may have some entertainment value and thus provide a genuine service may be more suited to Britain.

Picket Blames Federal Agency

By AB KENT
Times Staff

A Victoria businessman who says he must close his doors because he can't get Federal Business Development Bank financing picketed the Fort Street office of the agency Thursday.

"In my business — if I fold — two jobs go up the tube," said Glenn Short, of Hocking Book (1977) Ltd. and Van-Isle Teachers Supply Store.

"Multiply this situation across the country and it's no wonder we've got a million unemployed," he said, displaying a placard which said: "Federal Business Development Bank does not help small businesses who are having financial problems."

It also said Short could employ up to six persons with proper financing.

He said in his interpretation, the FBDB was established to help small firms who don't have a proven record and therefore can not qualify for conventional bank financing.

"I'm not looking for a handout — just a bona fide loan at good interest."

Short said he took on Hocking Book a year ago and invested $20,000 to $30,000 of his own funds.

"I put everything into it and that was a mistake," he said adding he was left with no operating and development capital.

He applied for a $25,000 loan from the FBDB, thinking its policies were more flexible than the chartered banks but was refused because his business is considered financially unstable since it lost about $3,000 in its first year of operation under Short.

Most of the expenses were unavoidable, he said, because he had to vacate premises about to be demolished and set up in a new location.

Short said he attempted to see if he could get any political help through Esquimalt-Saanich Tory MP Donald Munro but received only a mimeographed form letter from the minister responsible, Jack Horner, and no loan.

Ken White, assistant manager of the bank's Victoria office, said the door is still open for Short.

"We'll back him if he can make a sound proposal outlining reasonable prospects." White said.

He said Short has not been singled out and there are other businesses which find they can't meet the bank's criteria.

These include the chance of success in the particular enterprise and the effectiveness of management.

Renovating Old Garden?

With the current trend in renovatng old homes and old furniture, there could easily develop a trend to old fashioned gardens to suit the homes.

A first requisite would be a trellised walk of weathered brick, with, in time, a wistaria to drape its mauve or white flowers on each side and through the overhead bars.

While giving the wistaria two or three years to begin its climbing role, the archway will be made fragrant with sweet peas and clematis.

Choose a clematis color to complement the wistaria choice, for it will add to the beauty of the walk if planted where it will quickly become most decorative. The choice of season to bloom is yours — May for the small flowered Clematis montana and its colored varieties; summer for large flowered hybrids and early fall for Jackmanni hybrids. Not that all these were available at the beginning of this century, but the clematis as a family goes back much further.

For background plantings where wind cannot lay them low, put in annual hollyhocks, in pink to go with blue delphiniums.

Long lasting and spectacularly lovely in bold groups are Canterbury-bells with their cup-and-saucer flowers in pink, blue-purple and pure white. These are biennials, so you can't have them flower the first year. Sow the seeds by June 1; put the young plants into growing spaces in September ready for the abundant bloom next year in June and July with a few more later in the season.

Tall feathery-leaved cosmos in pink and white date back to early 1900's, and still are a fine late summer garden annual and cut flower.

Cosmos like sun and warmth to grow well. Sow a few seeds where they are to grow, then thin out and transplant a few while small, you may have success in a fine group. Remember to cut off the old flowers to keep new ones coming right through to thanksgiving at least.

Geums are perennials frm the past century, still seen in a few gardens. They turn up in nurseries in the old lovely scarlet variety Mrs. Bradshaw, and the clear golden yellow Lady Stratheden. The plants at 15 or 18 inches tall continue in flower all summer if old ones are nipped out.

Scotch marigolds (Calendula) in glowing orange were a reliable annual in old gardens. They grow so readily here that the plants often persist through the mild winters, still giving the odd bloom. In ordinary years, they continue in bloom until late in the season, providing bouquets for house and visitors.

Strawflowers are one of the group known as Everlastings. These have been popular for growing in areas where summers were hot and winter came early and stayed long. When properly dried, Everlastings were just that, filling a long gap when living fresh flowers were unobtainable.

Middle aged gardeners of today might think of their grandparents' garden with a collection as listed, and say they haven't the time to grow them all. Today is different.

If the grandparents of the early 1900's had time with all the time-consuming manual chores of daily life, try to give this old fashioned garden a trial. You may enjoy it enough to add some old fashioned improvements of your own ideas.

OMMLRA to Fail?

KAMLOOPS (CP) — The lockout of civic employees in eight Interior municipalities by the Okanagan Mainline Municipal Labor Relations Association will lead to the demise of the organization, a spokesman for the Canadian Union of Public Employees said Thursday.

Jim Kelly, national union representative, said the lockout will polarize the 800 workers against the association and "there's no way the OMMLRA can survive."

"There's nothing CUPE could have done to be more damaging to the association than what they've done to themselves by this lockout action," he said.

OMMLRA president Fred Macklin, a city alderman, said Wednesday the lockout against CUPE was initiated "because we can't get down to bargaining."

The lockout affected workers in Kelowna, Keremeos, Oliver, Osoyoos, Princeton, Penticton, Summerland, Salmon Arm and the Thompson-Nicola Regional District.

The association is negotiating with union locals in 10 municipalities. The lockout excludes Revelstoke, where CUPE members went on strike March 2, and Kamloops where talks were scheduled for Monday.

Macklin said CUPE does not like bargaining with the association and wants instead to bargain separately with the municipalities.

Many workers went to their jobs Thursday morning but left after being informed they would get no assignments.

At issue is a clause proposed by the union that would ban contracting out of municipal work. The unions fears contracting out will mean layoffs but the association says it is a long-established practice on civic projects.

CARPING COMPLAINT among local fish lovers is the scarcity of fresh fesh, but they just don't come any fresher than the plump carp kept in a holding tank at Capt. Andy's Fish Market, 5325 Cordova Bay Road. Here store owner Sophie Harder helps supplier Ken Clubbe, of Golden Carp Farms, Whonnock, B.C., dump another wrigglin'-fresh, grain-fed consignment into the tank. Harder runs the only live-fish market on Vancouver Island. The carp average about two and a half pounds, and she stocks up with 500 pounds every two weeks. Those in the know say it's a delicious fish; the meat white and firm with a mild, sweet flavor. Carp has been used for centuries and is popular in Chinese, European and Jewish cuisine.

Mail Rate Going to Court?

OTTAWA (CP) — Progressive Conservative postal critic Walter Dinsdale said Thursday he may take the federal government to court for ignoring a report, approved unanimously by the House of Commons, which questions the legality of recent postal rate increases.

Dinsdale said the government has indicated it intends to ignore the joint Senate-Commons committee report and continue to use illegal methods to increase postal rates without consenting to Commons scrutiny.

The matter concerns the April 1 increase for first class mail to 14 cents from 12 cents and whether the government used the right piece of legislation.

In the Commons, Postmaster-General Gilles Lamontagne told Dinsdale and other oppostion MPs they should not worry so much about whether the government is conducting its business legally.

He said MPs should direct their attention to more serious matters such as prompt mail delivery "instead of losing our time to know if rates are legal or not."

The postmaster-general said he has been assured by justice department lawyers that that the government is acting legally and that there is no need to change the current procedure.

Meanwhile a Liberal MP charged Thursday that Opposition Leader Joe Clark has abused his Commons postal privileges to mail partisan material that gives the Progressive Conservatives a pre-election advantage.

Maurice Dionne (Northumberland—Miramichi) said Clark should reimburse the public treasury for the several thousands of dollars in postal fees required to mail the party's newsletter entitled Bulletin.

The Conservatives recently made a similar charge against the Liberals, saying Liberal party propaganda had been distributed with monthly family allowance cheques.

Speaker James Jerome ruled that he does not have the authority to intervene and that the public acts as the final judge of these matters.

Dionne spoke through a barrage of catcalls and at one stage there was this exchange:

Dionne: "While they (opposition members) are very good at throwing bricks, they are not very good at catching them."

Walter Baker, Conservative House leader: "Throw a brick."

Dionne: "This is the paper if they wish to see it, and this is the envelope."

One member: "Where are your nephews, Huey, Dewey and Louis?"

SALT Talks Progress

By MURREY MARDER
and KEVIN KLOSE

MOSCOW (WP) — The United States and the Soviet Union made a guardedly promising start Thursday night on a decisive phase of nuclear arms negotiations, signalling each other that a failure is certain to do great damage to their total relationship.

After 6 1-2 hours of morning and evening talks in the Kremlin, the equally wary negotiators would tell reporters only that they were encouraged by the seriousness displayed on both sides. An American spokesman Thursday night stressed, "We are in negotiations" to signify that the delegations are not simply making posturing statements at each other.

As an indication of purpose, the delegations agreed to use the maximum time available in the current schedule of Secretary of State Cyrus Vance by projecting negotiations to run through Saturday afternoon, beyond the Thursday and Friday meetings originally announced.

At the end of the initial sessions, the American spokesman, relaying Vance's deliberately low-key diplomatic terminology to avoid arousing expectations that might collapse in another rebound against the Carter administration, said Vance regarded the first day's results as "useful" and the atmosphere as "good."

Between the day's two meetings, Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, at a luncheon honoring Vance, said solemnly: "I do think that I would be very close to the truth if I were to say that the responsibilities today upon him (Vance) and upon the Soviet Union might be greater today than they were during his previous visit to this country."

Gromyko added that he knew "we can all draw conclusions" about what he was referring to. He said he thought it best not to amplify that remark — which brought laughter from the audience of diplomats.

Gromyko was referring to the disastrous encounter 13 months ago in the Kremlin when the new, brash, untested Carter administration stunned the Soviet Union by calling for a drastic change in the arms control negotiating pattern.

The United States said its objective was to leapfrog the previous approach by moving swiftly to "deep cuts" in nuclear arsenals.

In an angry public crossfire, the Soviet Union rejected out of hand all the American proposals, charging the United States with seeking "unilateral advantage." Carter fired back that the United States was determined to "hang tough."

It has taken the intervening months to thaw that frigid impasse and to bring the strategic arms limitation talks (SALT) to its current stage, within range of an agreement this year.

Husky Refinery Workers Strike

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Members of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union remained on strike Thursday at the Husky Oil refinery here and no talks between the two sides were planned.

OCAWU local 9-817, representing 36 workers, began the strike Wednesday afternoon, shutting down the operation as well as a $13 million construction project underway at the refinery.

The employees were striking to back contract demands.

British Columbia Railway workers refused to cross picket lines to pick up asphalt and the construction project was shut down when building trades workers also refused to cross.

Most of the construction asphalt in the area comes from Husky.

The union is seeking a fully-paid medical plan, a health and safety clause and no reduction in pay for number one operators. Under the previous contract, unsupervised operators received 30 cents an hour in addition to the regular wage, but the company wants to staff most or all shifts with supervisors.

House Fire

Saanich firemen are investigating an early morning fire that caused about $5,000 damage to a vacant house at 2991 Qu'Appelle.

The fire, reported by a neighbor at 12.16 a.m., started in the kitchen, swept into the attic and burned through a floor to the basement before firemen were able to extinguish it.

The home is owned by Charles Berger, operator of the Saanich restaurant, Chez Ernest.

DIFFICULT PROBLEM TO THRASH OUT . . .

By RICHARD COHEN
Washington Post

The kid will have no name and the adults will also have no names and the place where this happened will not be mentioned. There are children involved and adults who would rather not have their names in the paper, some of whom are not sure even yet whether what was done was right or wrong. One of them spanked a kid not his own.

It happened when the kid came around and made trouble. He was 10 years old, a boy of another neighborhood — a kid who sometimes behaved and sometimes didn't. This time he did not. This time he made a mess of something and then when the adult complained the kid opened his mouth and told him to drop dead.

He told him more than that. He stood there, this 10-year-old, and he talked of death and killing and then he hurled all the filthy words in the book at the adult. He was a street kid, a tough kid, and he had at his disposal all the words — all the words about parts of the body and the words about ancestry and the words combining the two. The adult had been around. He had been in the Army and he had heard these words but never from a child, and so he took off after the kid and he turned him upside down and he put his head in a plastic trash basket.

Everyone was watching. The neighbors were watching and the man's family was watching and so, too, was his wife. After the man took the kid out of the trash can, the kid picked up a brick, hurled it and ran. The man caught him. The man spanked him three times and then let him go. Later that day the police came. They more or less arrested the man. He had struck a child.

This is pretty much the story and this is the way I first heard it from one of the neighbors who had watched. We had been talking and I was saying how a colleague of mine was walking around the office asking everyone what he should do about this kid on his block who was pushing the other kids around — the other kids being his son and some others. He had warned the kid and he had talked to the father and now he was cruising the office, perplexed. What could he do? Could he hit the kid?

Good question. It's easy to say no. That's what the lawyers say: You cannot hit someone else's child. But they do not tell you what to do when the kid has called your bluff, when he is no longer playing by the rules that say that a child should respect an adult. There is a difference between an adult and a child. When a man calls the police to report that a child is cursing him he is not going to get three squad cars with their lights on. He's going to get a funny look.

Anyway, the fellow worked this around the office. We talked it over and we all agreed that what we would like to do was spank a kid who needed a spanking. There are limits and a child must understand that there are limits and one way you get that message across is with a spanking. You cannot, after all, control the environment of a kid you do not know. You cannot suspend him from school or change his classes or keep him after school or take away his allowance.

There was something said later by the man who spanked the kid. He referred to a parental instinct — a feeling that some adults have that they are responsible for children. You feel it sometimes when a kid runs in front of your car — that urge to admonish or spank — and you feel it when you see a kid out very late at night and you would feel it, certainly, when face-to-face with some foul-mouthed 10-year-old in an alley.

B.C. Recovered, Report Shows

B.C. enjoyed a year of economic recovery in 1977, according to a provincial government report released today.

Shipments of B.C. factory goods were worth $10.2 billion, up 17.3 per cent from the previous year.

Lumber was the main factor. Sawmills turned out 12 billion board feet during the year, up 12 per cent from a year ago.

The report, released by the ministry of economic development, showed B.C. retail sales totalled $7.3 billion during 1977, up 9.3 per cent from $6.6 billion the previous year. This represented a net gain of about two per cent because the Vancouver rate of inflation during 1977 was 7.5 per cent.

Mining also recovered strongly.

Housing starts totalled 24,297, down marginally from the previous year.

Construction will be much stronger this year, the report indicated, due to large-scale modernization programs in the forest industry.

The only serious weak spot in the economy during 1977 was construction, especially on the residential front. Building permits in B.C. totalled $1.7 billion during the year, down 5.4 per cent from $1.8 billion.

There was no great tourist surge across the province in 1977, although Victoria did well. The province as a whole had 1.8 million visitors, the same as in 1976. But they stayed longer. The hotel occupancy rate in B.C. climbed to 62 per cent from 59.7 per cent. There was a 13 per cent increase in traffic into B.C. from Alberta.

B.C. exports were worth $7.7 billion, up 16.3 per cent, while imports totalled $3.5 billion, up 15.5 per cent.

Mandarins Get Merit Hikes Only

The provincial government's highest-paid civil servants will in future get pay hikes based on performance under a new plan being introduced.

Finance Minister Evan Wolfe also announced salary increases averaging 5.7 per cent for the 1,400 public service employees not covered by a collective agreement.

He said the new job evaluation and salary administration plan. will relate salary increases to an individuaL's effort and performance.

Wolfe said this program will allow the government to maintain an acceptable correlation between the levels of executive compensation in the public service with practice in the private sector.

Performance evaluations will be made prior to any individual increase, said Wolfe.

The increase, retroactive to last Oct. 1, covers management executive employees up to and including deputy ministers.

SMASH KILLS YOUTH

One youth is dead and another in critical condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital after a car smashed into a power pole near the intersection of Cameron-Taggert Road north of Shawnigan Lake Thursday night.

Shawnigan Lake RCMP identified the dead youth as Bruce McAdam, 16.

In critical condition is David Couzens, 16.

A third youth in the car, Bill Johnson, 17, is in satisfactory condition in Cowichan District Hospital in Duncan.

All three are from the Cobble Hill area and were southbound on Cobble Hill Road when the accident occurred shortly after 9 p.m.

Police, assisted by volunteer members of the Mill Bay fire department, used the Jaws of Life cutting tool to free the youths from the wreckage.

A police spokesman said it is not known who was the driver.

The power pole was toppled, causing a widespread power failure. It took B.C. Hydro crews nearly two hours to restore service.

Euphoria Ends

The U.S. dollar fell against all major European currencies today as euphoria ended over the U.S. treasury's decision to support the U.S. currency by selling gold.

In New York, the Canadian dollar was down 1-20 at $0.8739.

TRIO STEALS $7 AT KNIFE POINT

Three teenage occupants of a group home are being sought after the home's operators were robbed of $7 at knifepoint Thursday night.

The robbery was one of two overnight.

A Victoria police spokesman said the suspects — two girls aged 15 and 16 and a boy aged 16 — fled after the couple at the Royal Victoria Group Home, 1250 Balmoral, were held up and robbed about 9.45 p.m.

The spokesman said the three residents of the home brandished knives and made threatening gestures towards the couple, whose names are being withheld.

Meanwhile Saanich police are looking for two men and two women who robbed a 23-year-old man of $109 early today.

A spokesman said Kenneth Stewart had joined the foursome at the Bastion Inn on Government and they offered to drive him home.

In the 100-block Maddock, Stewart and one of the men got out of the car and went to the back of a house where the man produced a knife and told Stewart to hand over his wallet.

WAGNER TO SENATE

OTTAWA (CP) — Claude Wagner, Progressive Conservative MP for the Quebec riding of St. Hyacinthe, resigned his Commons seat today and was appointed to the Senate.

Commons Speaker James Jerome said today as the Commons resumed sitting that Wagner's riding has become vacant because of a resignation.

The urbane MP, runner-up to Opposition Leader Joe Clark in a party leadership race in February, 1976, returned to the House recently following a lengtly illness.

Wagner, 53, had been confined at home for about four months before he eventually returned to public life early this year. Nature of his illness was never officially disclosed, although there were reports he was suffering from cancer.

Wagner's resignation cuts the Conservative party's strength in Quebec to two MPs — Roche LaSalle (Joliette) and Heward Grafftey (Brome Missisquoi).

Opposition Leader Joe Clark welcomed the move, saying Wagner had served Quebec and the country with distinction.

DON'T WALK

TRAFFIC SNARL—UP time is back again, as city streets sprout big holes, diversion signs and long lines of backed-up vehicles. One of the worst spots is Douglas just south of the intersection with Bay, where workmen are installing a new deep sewer, 14 or 15 feet down. The job is laboriously slow, a city official explained today, because the material is a mixture of rock, requiring blasting, and old landfill which tends to be unstable and involves extra precautions for safety reasons. Further traffic restrictions lie ahead, including closure of Bay Sunday April 30, but once the intersection itself has been completed the project will be shelved until the fall. Eventually, the sewer line will head east at Kings. (John McKay photo).

Still MP Work Before Vote: Trudeau

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau said Thursday he has set no date for a general election and wants to clear up some parliamentary business before naming the day.

"Apart from being a politician and concerned with elections, I have to manage the business of government and I have important business before the House," Trudeau told his weekly press conference. (See also page 30).

"No date has been set for an election. When it is, I will tell you."

Some speculation centred on announcement this weekend of a June election.

Trudeau's response to questions about the date of the expected election followed government efforts in the Commons to cool speculation that an election call is imminent.

An election might serve, however, as the best vehicle to debate constitutional proposals, Trudeau said.

The prime minister told the news conference he has not yet decided whether to introduce proposed constitutional amendments in Parliament or in an election campaign many MPs expect will soon begin.

However, he said he had suggested to his Liberal caucus that if the provincial and federal governments are unable to agree on constitutional amendments, it might be best to take the proposals to the people. The new government would then have a clear mandate.

Trudeau also said he considers the question of capital punishment settled despite growing indications it will again be an issue during the anticipated general election.

"As far as I'm concened the matter is settled," Trudeau told his news conference.

Polls published Wednesday showed 82 per cent of Canadians favor a referendum on the question of hanging.

B.C. Vows To Probe RCMP

Allegations that the RCMP carried out hundreds of "intelligence probes" and break-ins without warrants in B.C. will be investigated by Attorney-General Garde Gardom.

Gardom said he knew nothing about the RCMP's illegal activities.

If there was a need for such break-ins because of B.C. serious drug trafficking problems, Gardom said, he was guidelines drawn up to state precisely what measures the RCMP may or may not use.

It was revealed this week at the McDonald royal commission on abuse of police powers by the RCMP that 402 out of 419 illegal break-ins had occurred in B.C.

NDP MLA Ejected

NDP MLA Lorne Nicolson was ejected from the legislature this morning for calling Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf a liar.

When Nicolson, the member for Nelson-Creston, refused to withdraw the statement, Speaker Harvey Schroeder asked the Sargeant-At-Arms to escort him from the house.

It was the first ejection of this season, the first time Nicolson has ever been thrown out of the house and the first heave-ho order issued by Schroeder since he became speaker.

Nicolson rose on a point of order during debate on the bugdet and said Bawlf's comment that Nicolson failed to say one word about conservation during his earlier speech was "a damned lie" and said Balwf was a liar.

Airliner Forced Down By Soviet Jet Fighters

Times News Services

MOSCOW (CP) — A South Korean Boeing 707 airplane flying the North Polar route from Tokyo to Anchorage with 110 persons on board was forced to land by Soviet fighter planes after violating Russian airspace, the official Tass news agency said today.

Premier Alexei Kosygin confirmed that interceptors ordered the jetliner to land on Soviet territory and said two of the plane's passengers were dead, Japanese sources said.

It was not immediately known how they died.

But in Washington, a U.S. official claimed Soviet jet fighters fired at the jetliner.

Similar reports came from Japanese sources in Moscow and Tokyo.

In Seoul, Korean Airline navigation experts said there may have been a hijacking attempt since the pilot would have had to make a 90 degree turn to stray into Russian air space after taking off from Paris. They said a navigational error of that magnitude was "unthinkable."

Official Soviet sources told Western correspondents "there is no provocation in the incident."

Fifty-one of the 110 persons aboard the Korean Air Lines Boeing 707 were reported to be Japanese. The nationalities of the dead and injured were not known.

Soviet officials said the two passengers were killed when the Boeing 707 made a hard landing on a frozen lake south of Murmansk after it was ordered to land by Soviet fighter planes for violating Russian airspace.

A duty officer at Murmansk Airport said the jetliner had been ordered to land at Murmansk but came down far south of the airfield, damaging one wing.

The official new agency Tass said it flew over the Soviet Kola Peninsula, a highly sensitive area where Russian naval and rocket forces are located in heavy concentrations, and then continued southward.

The agency said the cause of the violation of the country's air space was being investigated while the passengers and crew were taken to the nearest town where arrangements were being made for them to leave the Soviet Union.

Earlier, Canadian officials initiated a major search operation of the Arctic from the Mackenzie River estuary in the Beaufort Sea to Ellesmere Island before word came that the airliner was on the ground in the Soviet Union.

Israel Stiffens Passover Patrols

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — Israel tightened its security precautions and mobilized thousands of soldiers and police today to prevent a possible Palestinian guerrilla strike during the Passover holiday that began at sunset.

Helicopter and motorcycle patrols added to the security screen along the tar-stained beaches from the Lebanese frontier south to Sinai and in forested picnic areas. Guerrillas previously have struck from the sea.

Troops and black-uniformed police, bolstered by green-bereted border police and civil defence units, set up roadblocks on major roads to check vehicles and their passengers.

The security precautions were among the most intensive undertaken for a holiday period.

The guerrillas generally have not struck Israel during holidays, possibly because of the heightened precautions. But Egypt and Syria chose the most solemn Jewish holiday, Yom Kippur, to launch a combined surprise attack in October, 1973.

Lt.-Gov. Praised

Premier Bill Bennett said Thursday he is pleased with the appointment of Henry Bell-Irving as successor to retiring Lieut.-Gov. Walter Owen.

"B.C. has been fortunate to have had the services of distinguished lieutenant-governors," Bennett told a news conference.

"The men who have served in Government House over the years have always had a strong commitment to community life in our province and have had distinguished careers in both public and private service."

He said that Bell-Irving, like Owen, has had particular interest in service to young people.

"Brigadier Bell-Irving has served on the board of the Children's Hospital which is under construction in Vancouver," Bennett said.

"He brings to his new position services to his community through his association with the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, the Vancouver Board of Trade, the Vancouver Real Estate Board and the Canadian Real Estate Association."

Prime Minister Trudeau announced Thursday that Bell-Irving will become lieutenant-governor of B.C. and that Senator Jean-Pierre Cote will assume the same role in Quebec.

Bell-Irving is chairman of the board of A. E. Lepage Western Ltd.

Both men have had long associations with the Boy Scout movement. Brig. Bell-Irving is vice-president of the Boy Scouts of Canada while Senator Cote was commissioner of the movement in the St. John's, Que. area.

Spinks Arrested On Dope Charges

Times News Services

ST. LOUIS — Heavyweight boxing champion Leon Spinks was arrested early today and charged with suspected possession of cocaine and marijuana.

He was later released on $3,700 Bail.

Spinks was stopped about 4 a.m. for driving without headlights. Sgt. Francis Corona, who said he did not recognize Spinks, approached him and asked for his driver's licence.

But Spinks, who had been arrested two months ago for driving without a licence and travelling the wrong way on a one-way street, again had no licence.

"I asked him for his licence," Corona said, "and he said something to the effect of, 'Come on, man. I'm Leon. You know I still don't got one.'"

Spinks threw his hat onto the top of the car as he got out, Corona said, and a search of the hat uncovered in the hatband a foil packet containing a substance believed to be cocaine.

The last time Spinks was arrested the NAACP protested the manner in which he was handled, including his being handcuffed. But Corona said the handcuffs were necessary again because he was being arrested on a suspected felony. "That's just procedure," Corona said.

$757,000 FOR UVIC

Gov't Switch Study

Five University of Victoria political scientists have won a $757,000 grant to conduct a five-year study of the impact of change on government and politics in B.C.

The research team will focus on the period 1969 to 1978, which saw the Social Credit Party defeated by the NDP and then return to power.

In 1972 W.A.C. Bennett was defeated after being premier for 20 years. The NDP, under now Opposition leader Dave Barrett, held power until toppled by Premier Bill Bennett in December 1975.

The project is designed to provide insight into the effect of change from one government to another on the structure and functioning of governmental processes in the province.

The researchers are Walter Young, chairman of UVic's political science department, and professors Neil Swainson, Norman Ruff, Terry Morley and Jeremy Wilson.

The money is being provided by the Social Science and Humanities Research Council, which is funded by the federal government's Canada Council.

In a news release, Young states that one of the principal advantages of the funding is that it enables the political science department to bring to the university a number of scholars to engage in research on the project, and to provide support for conferences and public lectures.

'MLAs Aren't Overworked'

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

A former member of the legislature said Thursday MLAs are not overworked and there is no reason to increase their number.

Ex-Liberal leader David Anderson told a royal commission on electoral reform any pressure to increase the size of the 55-seat legislature should be disregarded.

He said the facilities in the Legislative Buildings cannot adequately handle many more members and the MLAs, aside from party leaders and cabinet ministers, don't need extra help.

"There is no overwhelming workload that requires an increase in their numbers," he said.

"They have a workload to handle, sure, but if they want to do it they can and if they don't they won't."

Increasing the number of members won't change that situation, he added.

Anderson, like others who made appearances at the commission's 17th public hearing, told commissioner Larry Eckardt he favors a limit on election expenses.

He said he also favors dual-member ridings and said a close look should be given the alternate or preferential ballot, a system whereby voters don't just mark one candidate but list the candidates in order of preference.

On the subject of campaign contributions, John Green, executive assistant to Conservative leader Vic Stephens, said political contributions should be limited to individuals and corporate contributions should be prohibited.

He said there is no question that in politics "he who pays the piper calls the tune," meaning that corporate donations result in political favors.

He said there should be a limit on campaign expenses, adding that $10,000 seems to be adequate although any figure up to $20,000 would be all right.

Green, who appeared on his own behalf and not as a spokesman for the Conservative party, said candidates should have to get 50 per cent of the vote before being elected and some system should be adopted for giving tax rebates for political contributions to those who do not have any taxable income.

Irene Block, a Conservative candidate in the last provincial election, made a similar call for campaign expense limits in defending her brief which she submitted Wednesday when the commission met in Sidney.

She also suggested that no person or company shall donate more than a set amount to any political group or candidate.

Anything over and above that amount would be put in a trust fund.

Charles Barber, NDP MLA for Victoria, submitted a brief suggesting that in order to avoid confusion, an effort should be made to make municipal and provincial electoral boundaries the same.

The commission held a public hearing in Duncan today and next week moves to the northern B.C. ridings.

Two Picked By NDP

Two candidates were named Thursday by local NDP riding associations anticipating a federal election this summer.

Gretchen Brewin, 39-year-old housewife and political science graduate, was nominated by the Victoria constituency association, and former North Saanich mayor Paul Grieve, a land developer, was chosen by Esquimalt-Saanich NDP members.

Grieve, 34, of North Saanich, will face incumbent Conservative Donald Munro, whom he claimed is not the fighter the riding needs.

Brewin, a former NDP school trustee in Scarborough, Ont., is the wife of B.C. NDP president John Brewin and a resident of Fairfield. She will attempt to win the seat held by Tory Allan McKinnon.

Employment will be the key election issue, Brewin said.

She is at present on a federal contract with Prime Time, a project dealing with needs of women in middle age.

Victoria NDP MLA Charles Barber told the 200 people at the nomination meeting that the more than 1,000 Victoria NDP members are an important factor.

Picture Sparks Squabble

A picture in the Times of B.C. Federation of Labor secretary-treasurer Len Guy eating at a non-union Victoria restaurant March 29 touched off a heated argument at a Victoria Labor Council meeting this week.

Council delegate Tom Luscombe suggested the council write Guy stating the next time he or any other trade union brass come to Victoria they check with the council as to which eating establishments are organized.

Luscombe, delegate from the Hotel, Restaurant and Culinary Employees and Bartenders Union, said photos of Guy and other federation officials eating at Chez Pierre are embarrassing to his union.

Daryl Anderson, of the Candian Union of Public Employees, took the occasion to attack Luscombe's union saying it is due to its ineptnitude that it is difficult to tell which restaurants are union or non-union.

"If that union would make more inroads into organizing the hotels . . . then we would have more to choose from."

Jim Walker, another CUPE delegate, turned on Anderson saying there are lists available of union restaurants.

The whole matter was finally tabled.

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Accidents are the leading cause of death in children more than one year of age.

The car is the biggest killer of them all, causing more deaths than all other accidents combined.

Sobering statistics.

They're in a report to the B.C. Medical Association prepared by Drs. Andrew Gillespie and Peter Ransford of Victoria, and Dr. Herb Parkin of Vancouver.

They show 100 children five years of age and under are killed annually by car accidents in Canada.

Members of a subcommittee of the association's pediatric division, the doctors warn that 40 times that number are seriously injured in car accidents.

Gillespie says British Columbia can expect one tenth of the national deaths and injuries.

Provincial seatbelt legislation which went into effect Oct. 1, 1977, excluded children six years and under because no national standards have been set for child restraint systems in cars.

A contract has been awarded to the Canadian Standards Association in Ottawa to carry out research on what are defined as "infant carriers" and recommendations are expected to be received soon.

Gillespie says studies carried out in the state of Washington during the past six years reveal that no children have been killed while using suitable carriers.

While the B.C. legislation requires no protection for children under six it still holds the driver responsible.

Gillespie says this could prove a "terrible responsibility" and recalls an accident near Elk Lake several years ago. A young mother was doing a car pool run with children on their way to a nursery school. When the crash occurred five children were thrown out of the car, three of them receiving brain injuries.

In their report, the three doctors tell why children in this age group are the most vulnerable.

The skull is softer than an adult's and larger in proportion to the rest of the body. The ribbage is thinner and more elastic. A young child's prominent abdomen gives only limited protection to the large internal organs. The pelvic dimensions are limited by contrast and these factors make it important to provide crash protection for the infant and small child.

* * *

The committee has studied various types of available infant carriers and recommend, among others, the G.M. Child "Love Seat", the Dorel Trav-L-Guard, the Strolee "Wee Care" and Swyngomatic and the Century Motor-Toter.

Gillespie says the recommended infant carriers are available at The Bay, Woodwards, Eaton's and some automobile agencies.

Infants weighing less than 20 pounds should be in rear facing seats, anchored by the lapbelt. By facing the rear deceleration forces are spread over a large proportion of the baby's body.

"However, the rear-facing infant seat does provide protection which enables it to be used in the front seat," says Gillespie and his co-workers.

There are two basic designs for children weighing between 20 and 40 pounds. One is the five-point safety harness which spreads the force of the impact over the strongest part of the child's body. The other is seats with protective shields that allow the force of a collision to be spread over a large area of the body.

Children weighing more than 40 pounds or more than five years old should be strapped in with the lapbelt and sit upright against the back seat. The belt should be low against the hips and adjusted for a snug fit to prevent riding up across the abdomen. A shoulder belt should be used so long as it crosses the child's chest and not the neck or face. Two children should never be strapped by the same belt.

An infant and child car safety program should be part of every maternity service, the doctors recommend. Hospital inservice teaching programs should be promoted in every B.C. hospital.

Information should be made available at doctors' offices, hospitals and public health units.

"It is hoped that with this type of community program throughout B.C. the needs for automotive safety for this young age group will soon be voluntarily covered," the committee says. "It should then be only a matter of liaison with government to cover all age groups under the seatbelt legislation in the Motor Vehicle Act."

Motorcyclists to Fight For Their Favorite Hill

The Victoria Motorcycle Club lost its hill last week but Thursday served notice it won't take the loss sitting down.

Club spokesman Gary Nordstrom said in an interview the membership is fighting mad over a decision by the Victoria and Saanich parks committee to cancel the annual Mount Douglas Hill Climb.

He appealed to the public for support in the club's bid to win back the hill.

The climbs on the back side of the mountain have been held since 1920, and are rated as one of the top annual events in the 100-member motorcycle club.

"It's very important to us, it's got a lot of history conected with it," said Nordstrom.

The competition sees about 50 riders between the ages of 15 and 50 competing in four categories. The race, which is a straight uphill battle of man and machine versus gravity and a dirt track, is a one-day affair.

Nordstrom admits the race is noisy, but he says nobody has ever complained to the club.

At the committee meeting, said Nordstrom, noise was one of the reasons cited by the aldermen who voted to withhold this year's permit.

"It's noisy, sure, but we don't get complaints. Most of the people that live around there come to watch. It's an exciting event."

He said the club members were shocked this week when they were informed of the committee's decision.

Nordstrom said the club doesn't really know how to fight to get the hill back, but hopes the public will rally to its support.

"All we want is that one hill . . . we don't have another place to race. It's an ideal hill and there isn't another like it."

He said he thought one of the main reasons the club request for its annual permit was rejected was because of the motorcycle riders who use the horse trails in the park. Several years ago the trails were put off limits to bikes, but they're still used frequently despite the ban.

But Nordstrom said club members aren't the ones using the trails to go dirt-biking.

Nordstrom said the club has existed for more than 50 years in Victoria and has established a record of responsibility.

"This (parks committee) decision is really cutting against our tradition."

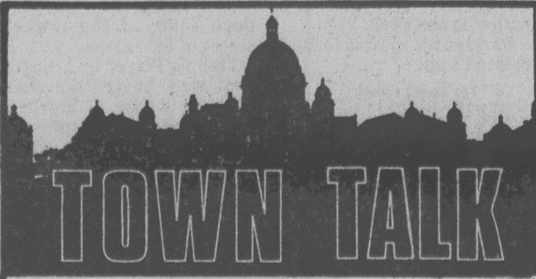
Overpass Requested

School children crossing the newly-widened Trans-Canada Highway at Helmcken Road each day need an overpass, says View Royal's Capital Regional District director.

Al Beasley has written Highways Minister Alex Fraser asking the minister to meet with him to discuss the problem.

Parents of children attending View Royal elementary school, who live in the northern section of View Royal, have protested the hazard.

Beasley said students attending the elementary school on Helmcken and Shoreline junior secondary school students are forced to cross the busy highway.



Author of the best mixed-metaphor quote of the week is Saanich alderman Dave Paterson.

During a planning committee discussion of the municipality's draft community plan, amid much waffling indecision, Paterson produced this exasperated comment: "It's imperative this council stand up and be counted and then sit down. We've got to finally pass it, put it to bed."

Well, okay. But, er, what was that again, Dave?

The old rockin' chair will get Grade 10 students from Cedar Hill junior secondary school who hope to raise $1,000 in a rock-a-thon Saturday at Market Square.

The youngsters want the money to help bring a group of exchange students from Quebec for a week. The Lions Club has started the fund with a $100 gift.

David Wilkins, fund-raising chairman, said of the visitors: "They paid all our expenses when we visited them last month and we feel we should do the same for them when they visit us in May."

More than 20 students, supported by pillows and Gravol, will try to rock for at least 12 hours from 8 a.m., rain or shine, and to collect money from individual sponsors donating on the basis of hours completed. One five-minute break per hour is permitted.

Potential sponsors may contact Wilkins at the school, 3910 Cedar Hill, 477-6945.

Scores of people on Saanich peninsula thought they saw a UFO Thursday night.

One man who spotted it slowly moving above Pat Bay Highway was so amazed he said he stopped his car and got out "to make sure I wasn't dreaming."

But alas, a visitor from outer space, the UFO wasn't.

An air controller at Pat Bay Airport said it was nothing more than a light plane, a Cessna 172, which had been equipped with an electronic billboard made up of several hundred lights under each wing.

The billboard, controlled by a computer, flashes out messages to observers below.

But obviously on this occasion, the message didn't get across.

Finamore was at The Empress from 1968 to 1973 and supervised Operation Teacup, the modernization of the interior of the hotel.

He caused a national furore when he said The Empress might need a government subsidy to keep it from being torn down. He later explained he meant in the distant future and The Empress is doing just fine in the 1970s.

Bellhop Gong

Victoria's only girl bellhop has joined the ranks of the unemployed after three-and-a-half months on the job.

Nineteen-year-old Denise Steffens was told to pack her bags a week ago by her boss, Jim Tapson, manager of the Executive House Hotel, 777 Douglas.

He says she wasn't suited for the job. She says she was and notes no reason for her dismissal was given on her separation slip.

Denise says, however, she's through with bellhopping.

"I didn't mind the job but there were a lot of people who were offended by a girl carrying their bags. They just didn't like it," she says.

Tapson says that's news to him. "No one has ever complained to me about girls doing the job."

A young man has been hired to replace Denise.

CBC-TV Broadcasts Cole's Superspecial

It's Gold Record night on CBC-TV Monday April 24, when the gala Natalie Cole Superspecial hits the airwaves at 9 p.m. The guest line-up joining the shining Miss Cole (who herself has three gold records to her credit) includes top rhythm and blues group Earth, Wind and Fire, the legendary Johnny Mathis, and Best New Male Vocalist of 1977 Stephen Bishop.

The program will also be shown Thursday, April 27, on Channel 7 at 10 p.m.

This is an hour devoted entirely to current popular music, and with such dynamic performers joining host Natalie Cole, the musical sparks are expected to fly.

With taping only just recently completed, production details are not yet available, but the word is that this special presentation has more than its share of class.

Natalie Cole sings her big hit "Inseparable" from her first album, and joins Johnny Mathis in an oldie, but a goodie, "Small World". In a segment specially taped at Los Angles' famous Greek Theatre, where a 12-year-old Miss Cole first sang with her famous father, the late Nat 'King' Cole, Natalie joins the mercurial Stephen Bishop on his current chart-topper "On and On", and Bishop sings "Save It for A Rainy Day".

Voted "Favorite Rhythm and Blues Group" by the American Music Awards, the group Earth, Wind and Fire are joined by Natalie Cole in a collective medley of their hits, like Shining Star, and That's the Way of the World, among others. Natalie Cole does her exciting vocal solo numbers "This Will Be", "La Costa", "Our Love", and the Beatles' "Lucy In The Sky With Diamonds" to the accompaniment of an all-star backing group.

This is a must for all lovers of popular music — whether it's rock, pop, blues or ballads. These are pop singers of the first magnitude — don't miss this chance to see them performing singly, and together.

Executive Producer is Dick Clark, of American Bandstand fame, choreography is by George Faison (of Broadway's "The Wiz"), and Music Director is the great Nelson Riddle.

Benji Is a Real Star

First-class accommodations are just one of the many benefits of being a superstar, and even those of the four-legged variety are entitled to a nice wide seat, a good movie, and the attentive ministrations of a smiling stewardess.

Most dogs, when travelling by plane, are relegated to a box stored in the luggage compartment, and have only a bowl of water and suitcases to keep them company.

But not Benji. The floppy-eared mutt, who, after two feature-length movies and a seven-year stint on "Petticoat Junction" has become "America's Most Huggable Hero" and is treated like a member of the elite jet set on his many trips abroad. Together with his owner, trainer and best friend, Frank Inn, Benji has travelled first-class to England, France, Italy, Canada, Greece and Japan, and always with his own ticket and his own seat.

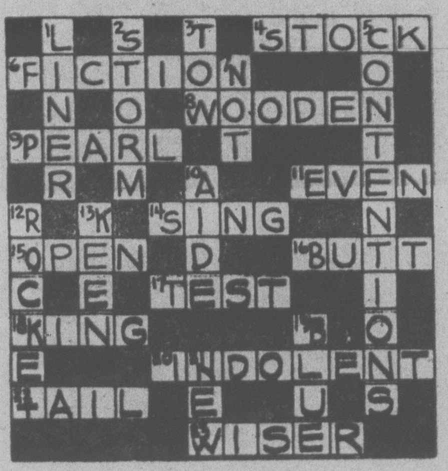
A half-hour special, "The Phenomenon of Benji" saluting the canine's career, will air on the CBC Television Network, Friday, April 28, at 8 p.m. on channels 2 and 6.

In the accompanying photos; Benji is ready with a smile as the flight begins, proceeds to a yawn for the long passage, inspects the glass for spots, and perhaps is thinking, "If this is a champagne flight, how come I only got water?"

The program will be repeated on ABC May 4.

PAYOFF PUZZLE

Correct Answers to Last Week's Puzzle



CLUES ACROSS

4. STOCK not stack or stick. The clue's calculating, quantitative attitude suits a distinct STOCK of bombs in hand rather than a "stack" (just a vague quantity) or a stick (row of bombs as actually dropped — also vague.
6. FICTION not diction. Thanks to education, one has good diction (why should the benefit rest in the appreciation of the diction of others?) and can appreciate good FICTION.
8. WOODEN not woolen. They "make" WOODEN articles to "use." They knit woolen articles to wear, rather.
9. PEARL not pears. The clue's speculative wording suggests a vague formative period, but pears have a distinct growing season.
11. EVEN not ever. Since the clue is already expressed in terms of eternity ("will never get up early"), nothing is gained by inserting another "ever"; there is more point in choosing "EVEN".
14. SING not ring. To SING at an unsuitable time is a bad practice, as suggested, but one may have an important reason to ring.
15. OPEN not oven. The tone of "it's only natural" hints that such smells might be preferably be avoided; this favors OPEN (as of a door leading to the kitchen). In any case, the oven door would have to be OPEN at the time of smells wafting out.
17. TEST not best. The clue's word "among" favors TEST. The best pilots simply are the most outstanding.
18. KING not kind. Aptly, a man can be KING and he can "also" be a cruel man. On the other hand, when one is said to have to be "cruel to be kind," the so-called cruelty is supposed to be kindness of a sort.
20. INDOLENT not insolent. "Behaving," in the clue, suits INDOLENT better. One thinks of being insolent as a way of speaking, rather.
22. TAIL not toil. The clue applies more directly to a TAIL, or to the period of toil. In itself, toil is thought of as heavy, rather than long.
23. WISER not wider. In any case, it must be beneficial to be WISER. A wider course might, for instance, lead to over-diversification which is not beneficial.

CLUES DOWN

2. STORM not stork. A STORM could be said to have its picturesque "side" (in constrast to its more actively unpleasant side). A stork, if one likes it, is simply a picturesque bird. Story is not favored.
3. TOW not row. "Inevitably" refers to the unavoidable, or that which one would not particularly choose; however, one may row for physical exercise.
5. CONTENTIONS not conventions. CONTENTIONS are more directly a matter of verbal argument. In any case, one hardly seeks to talk people out of their conventions.
7. NOT not now. Most people would agree with the evidence that the world is (now) a lot more civilized. Nevertheless, if so inclined, one is at liberty to "feel" that real civilization has NOT advanced all that much.
12. ROCKET not pocket. For a ROCKET, "as far as practicable"; but a pocket computer may need merely to be made as small as necessary (i.e., without saving all possible weight and space, perhaps at high cost).

SOAP OPERA SCENE

York: "I'm So Nasty"

By STEVEN SCHEUER

NEW YORK — "I'm so nasty," says Francine York, describing her character Lorraine Temple, the shapely new blackmailer of "Days of Our Lives."

Conditioned to playing sexy secretaries — eye-filling ladies who open doors, answer mail and brighten the scenery for a few moments on night-time television — Francine latched onto a colorful villain for her initiation into the world of soap.

"I have yet to find one redeeming quality in Lorraine," notes Francine, marveling over the character's capacity for trouble-making.

Lorraine appeared from out of the blue this winter on "Days," a handsome poisonous spider-of-a-lady designed to foul up the lovely-dovey relationship between sweet, understanding Marlena and Don, who is currently running for state senator.

Noticing Don's picture in the paper, Lorraine realized this man once shared her bed as a college student for two months. Don could easily have been the father of daughter Donna, so the opportunist decides to put the bite on the gentleman for $75,000, or take her case to the newspapers.

Blatant blackmail doesn't intimidate Don, who won't even go for the reduced sum of 35 grand, a settlement both his campaign manager and financee Marlena consider feasible.

Meanwhile, Lorraine takes up with the drunken no-good Neil in hopes of ready cash, and imports daughter Donna, to bolster her blackmail case. Daughter Donna turns out to be a criminally advanced character — a lying, cheating terror capable of giving Mom lessons in evil.

Thus, conniving Lorraine and devious daughter Donna spike "Days" episodes this spring with a much needed shot of vitality and villainy. After all, the soap's leading heel, Larry Atwood, who raped Julie, is cold in the grave. Lorraine and daughter must fill Larry's spot.

PLOT PORTENTS. A big church wedding for Linda and Bob Anderson, with Mary Anderson as the reluctant maid of honor, is scheduled this week on "Days of Our Lives." that's the good news. Now for the dark side of "Days," Lorraine, the blackmailer, and particularly daughter Donna, create havoc, while Margo battles leukemia, attended by a very worried Mike.

The new lady medic on "The Young and the Restless," Casey Reed, intrigues Snapper, who is struggling to get along without Chris. Vanessa continues to advise her offspring on their love-life and receives little satisfaction. Look for more hanky-panky between Lance and Lesie.

When Charles visits Phoebe on "All My Children," he see helpful signs of her recovering from her paralysis. Erica continues to keep Brooke from making points with Tom and Christina receives a love letter from Jeff which sets the stage for further developments.

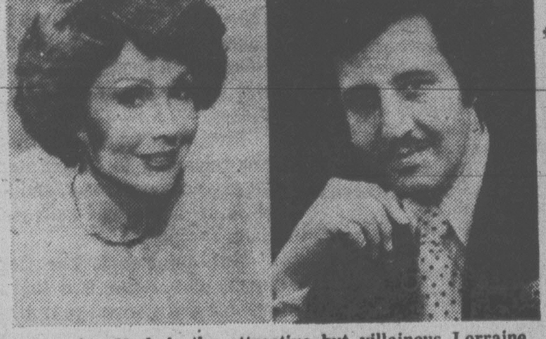
On "Ryan's Hope," devious Delia is up to more dirty work as she desperately tries to keep Pat from leaving her. Maeve and Johnny strenuously object to Delia's behavior and Bob steps in, bringing the family squabble to an abrupt halt. Delia, in her anguish, tries to consult a clergyman but even this move backfires.

Paula's matchmaking efforts concerning Neal and Trudy Bowen aren't jelling in "High Hopes." Paula also tries too hard to get Jessie to warm up to her and finally, Michael's desperation makes Paula put her troubles aside for a short time.

CHANNEL CHATTER. Lloyd Battista, wo is seen as Ray Slatter in "Love of Life," has directed from time to time but recently he became involved as the director of a huge American pageant, which will depict the history of the state of Kansas. It's a mixed-media production and a mammoth undertaking which won't premiere until the summer of 1979 in Kansas City. Among the actors appearing in the production are Henry Fonda and "Love of Life" co-star Peg Murray (she's Carrie Lovett) ... Kate Mulgrew, the original Mary Ryan of "Ryan's Hope," left the soap to seek other acting jobs and she's been set to co-star with David Janssen, Geraldine Chaplin, Janice Rule, John Huston, and Nicol Williamson in "The Word," a CBS prime-time mini-series based on Irving Wallace's best seller ... "Edge of Night" has opened an annex off-broadway, in a manner of speaking.

Shirtsleeves Theater is the locale for a production of "Dear Liar" starring Louis Turrene (he's Anthony Saxon) and Lois Kibbee (she's Geraldine Whitney Saxon), produced by Nick Nicholson (the producer of "Edge of Night") and directed by John Driver (he plays Kevin Jamison in the soap). That's truly a family affair ... Remember radio? Well, CBS Radio Mystery Theater is flourishing and many of the top stars of the soaps are doing double duty appearing on the Mystery Theater. Among the many soap stars who sandwich a radio performance in betwen TV acting are Lloyd Battista of "Love of Life" (he's really a busy man), Jada Rowland of "The Doctors," William Griffis of "All My Children" and Larry Haines of "Search for Tomorrow." ...

"Love of Life's" busy costume designer Carol Luiken is branching out with her pins and needles. She recently designed the costumes for the PBS production of Gian Carlo Menotti's "The Saint of Bleecker Street".



Francine York is the attractive but villainous Lorraine Temple on Days of Ours Lives. Lloyd Battista, busy as he is as Roy Slater on "Love of Life," is director of a pageant depicting the history of the state of Kansas. He also squeezes in some radio acting chores.

John Hearn's Collectibles

I am not normally critical of anything people collect. If someone wants to put together the world's biggest collection of rubber duckies, that's fine by me; but I must admit to more than a mild distaste for Nazi memorabilia.

It seems to me that collecting of objects which have no intrinsic value of their own other than that created by the actual process of collecting, arises out of some form of nostalgia — a yearning for the past, an honoring of another age when workmanship meant something, perhaps. There are all kinds of valid reasons but they all suggest times when things were, in some way, good. Even Depression memorabilia, to take an extreme example, may conjure up times of cooperation with neighbours, adversity and courage, ingenuity, a gift for survival. Our own war memorabilia brings back days of danger, comradship, excitement and the feeling of being part of a great enterprise.

But what can be said of Nazi memorabilia? What honour sould be paid to the most shameful episode in human history? It is not for me to say. The fact is that there is a rising demand for Nazi mementos — particularly in England. It is fairly big in the U.S. and, I am happy to observe, far less so in Canada. Moral judgments aside, I will admit that they fall under my classic definition of a collectible — something made in vast quantities with a collector in mind and then thrown away in almost equally vast quantities. Those associated with the Nazi party discreetly destroyed their insignia as the allied armies advanced into Germany and most of the material that has survived was brought home as souvenirs by returning soldiers. The most popular items seem to be ceremonial daggers bearing the swastika, badges, and medals.

Nicholas Pine is an English dealer in heraldic war and he has just sent me a copy of his latest History and Price Guide to Goss China. The prices quoted will send readers galloping to their whatnots.

Wm. Goss thrived in the mid 1800s. He became W. T. Copeland's chief designer while still in his early 20s and was famous for his fine work in porcelain. It was his eldest son, Adolphis, who reached out for the mass market by merchandising porcelain miniatures bearing the coats of arms of virtually every institution in Great Britain which boasted an heraldic emblem. since he was personally interested in archeology he based his miniatures on a wide variety of antique shapes and later introduced more general decorations such as forgetmenots, seagulls and suits of armour. he developed special designs exclusively for each dealer — just how many is unknown, but probably more than 7000.

In 1893 he introduced a new and highly successful range of coloured models in porcelain of famous buildings. These are now known as 'cottages' and are eagerly sought by collectors at some very fancy prices.

Goss miniatures, immensely popular in Victorian times, fell into disfavor after World War 1 and were only rediscovered by collectors a few years ago, and since that time prices have climbed out of sight.

Pine's book, priced at 5.75 pounds sterling, is available from him at Molestone Publications, Portsdown Hill Road, Havant, Hampshire, P09 3JY, U.K. I'll do my best to find prices for curious readers — but I can't find buyers.

Readers letters should be addressed to Collector's item, c/o Victoria Press, R.R. No. 1, Lowbanks, Ontario, N0A 1K0.

Stoppard's Play Begins Trilogy

Tom Stoppard's Professional Foul, a provocative drama set in present-day Prague, will be presented on Great Performances Wednesday, April 26 at 9 p.m. (rebroadcast Sunday, April 30 at 3 p.m.) on Public TV 9. The play is the first presentation of a trilogy of Great Performances dramas dealing with human rights.

When the play first aired in England, the London Times called it "a magnificent piece of television," and the television critics cited it as the "Best Play of 1977." The drama stars Peter Barkworth, John Shrapnel, Stephen Rea and Richard O'Callaghan.

Professional Foul involves a Cambridge professor who is invited by the Czech government to attend a pholosopy symposium. Although the professor makes an earnest attempt to steer clear of political trouble, he witnesses first-hand the invasion of privacy and deprivation of personal rights which are part of everyday life in that country. Outraged at the injustice, he defers the philosophical paper which the symposium expects from him and addresses the conference on the risky topic of rights and rules and the totalitarian state.

The professor discovers, explains Stoppard, ". . . that human rights are not the gift of society to be legitimately retracted at society's will. On the contrary, he asserts concepts like freedom, fairness, justice, and so on derive from a system of ethics which is the product of each man's recognition of his fellow man's rights. Society comes later."

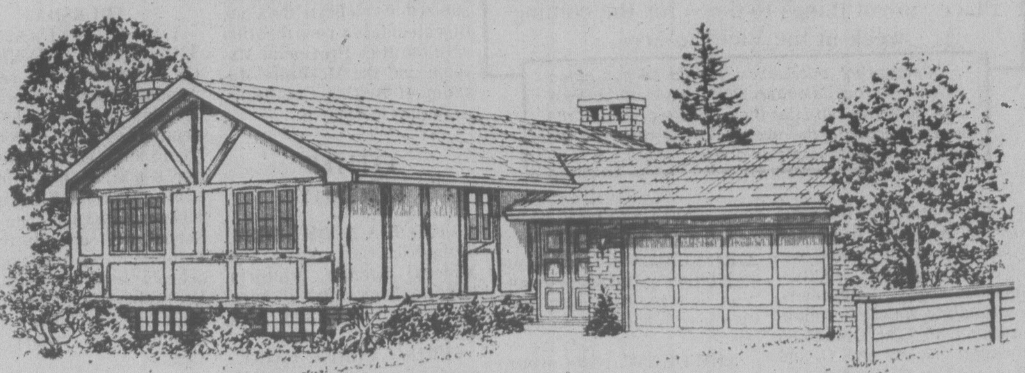
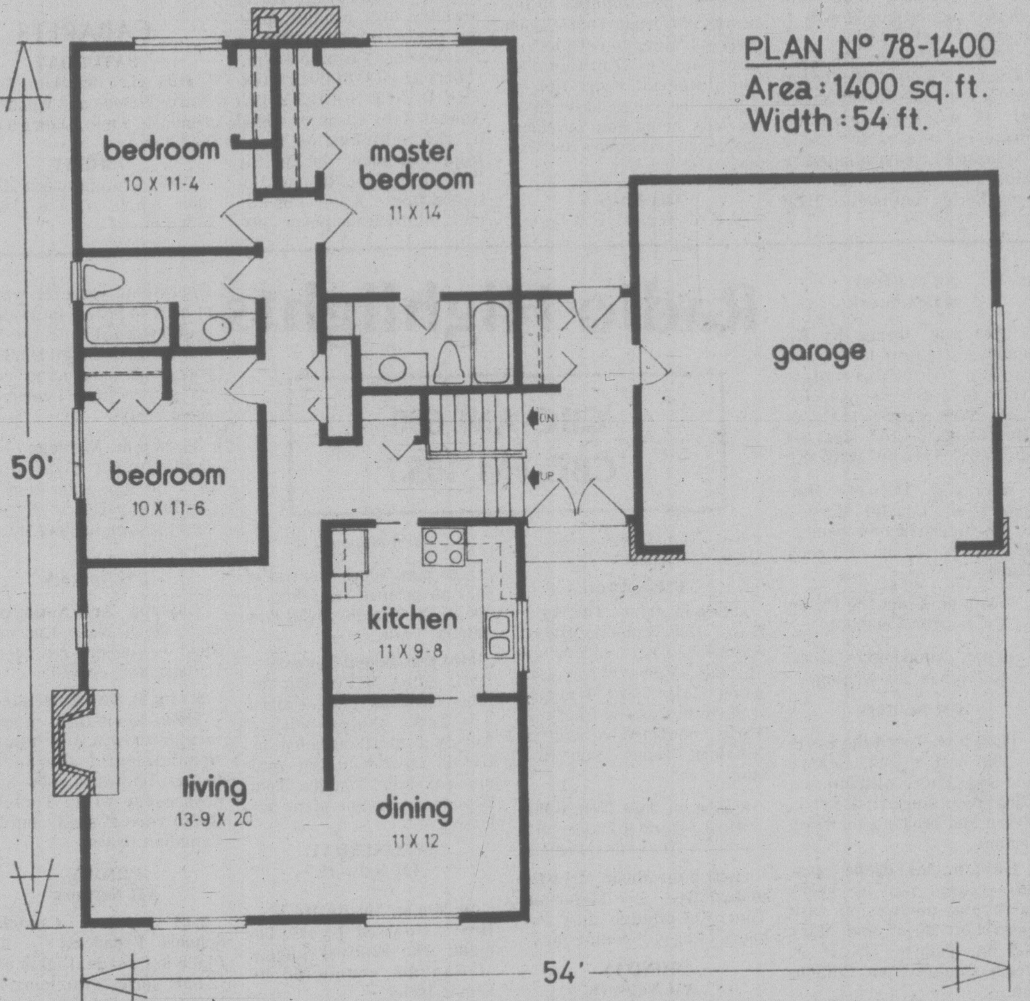
Home of the Week





Tudor–Style Split Entry Home

Here's an exciting three bedroom, full basement, split entry design which is ideally suited to the wide lot, and which offers the larger or growing family a wide range of convenience features combined with traditional styling.

The mixed stucco and board of the Tudoresque exterior, combined with the brick veneer and small-paned windows, recall the traditional cottages of Shakespearean England.

The weather-sheltered entrance leads into a compact reception foyer, from which one moves up three risers and into the main living area of the home.

The enclosed L-shaped kitchen provides for a breakfast nook and separates from the dining room and hall via pocket doors.

The L-shaped living-dining room combination provides the cozy warmth of a wood-burning fireplace and the added advantage of positioning away from the bedroom complex for disturbance-free entertaining.

All three bedrooms are grouped around the central bathroom, and each has good natural lighting and ample closet storage. The master has a three-piece ensuite bath with tub and linen storage area to leave the master bath free for children and guests. A large linen storage closet is conveniently located opposite the master bathroom.

A double full garage offers the convenience and security of a completely protected separate entrance to the main foyer, and has adequate space for the future development of a workshop for the home handyman.

The full basement affords the growing family ample room for storage and the future development of additional bedrooms, and/or recreation or family rooms.

A charming tradition inspired design combining practicality and eyeappeal.

Plans for design No. 78-1400 maybe purchased either by the single set, at a cost of $70. for the first set and $10. for each additional set, or by the package. Pat Barclay

— There's not much moss on the sales and promotion people at PaperJacks. (PaperJacks is the paperback arm of General Publishing, the firm which acquired the Canadian branch of Simon & Schuster when the U.S parent company was bought up by Gulf & Western a year or so ago.) They've just launched a bulky but impressive campaign to promote their line, which consists of 12 new titles each month. The tactic is to supply "selected reviewers" with all 12 titles monthly for the forseeable future, in the fond expectation that eventually someone will condescend to review a paperback book.

What with a husband addicted to exotic newspapers, a paperboy son and a daughter whose enthusiasm for writing is second only to her penchant for practising it on stray scraps of paper, the paper fallout at our house is close to unmanageable already. Add 12 unexpected paperbacks to the confusion and it's no wonder I'm having trouble remembering what color the carpet is.

It's no simple task to remember all 12 titles, either. (Sample: Time of Reckoning, Far Beyond Desire, and Of Pure Blood. Even a writer's mother would forget those.) Of the 12, four are original novels written by Canadians. Two more are from Playboy Press of Chicago, and the remaining six originated with Pocket Books, of Simon & Schuster, of Gulf & Western, in New York. PaperJacks, you see, acts as Canadian distributor for the two U.S. firms. It also published one of the original Canadian novels — The Periwinkle Assault by Charles Dennis — by arrangement with its English publisher, Futura. (I mention all this in case you had an idea that the publishing business was uncomplicated.)

Naturally, the four Canadian novels are of principal interest here. Noble Madness, by Maye Preston Hill, is probably the best. It combines a horse story with psychic intimations, Indian folksy lore and a panting, virginal heroine obviously modelled on Harold Robbins' Betsy. There's a lot of talk about poetry, and a Mellors-style horse trainer for the entertainment of any literary enthusiasts who wander into the book by mistake, and a middle-aged love interest to divert its most likely readership. With so many bases covered, Maye Preston Hill should be her publisher's delight.

The Bomb Makers, "a tale of nuclear terror" by Vic Mayhew, succeeds in being thoroughly nasty on every count. (Sample quote: "(He) thrust the knife upwards through the driver's adam's apple. The blade jarred on striking the driver's skull . . ." This little nicety occurs in a story about five cracked-brained young terrorists who construct a home-made atom bomb and decide it would be amusing to blow up the U.N. It's also studded with dialogue on the order of "But why did you do it? Why?" Punk rockers, move over. Punk paperbacks are on the march.

Then there's Josephine Edgar's Duchess, about a fabulously beautiful London shop girl and her love life. This one dabbles in S and M, but it's a half-hearted effort and unlikely to offend any Duchess of Duke Street fans who were hoping for more of the same. Edgar's Duchess is not the woman the TV heroine was, but she's far from a vapid Harlequin product. The book should appeal to women readers who can stomach lines like "They gazed at each other with hungry longing", and "To her horror and astonishment he fell on his knees before her."

The most interesting thing about Charles Dennis' The Periwinkle Assault is the brief biography of its author. Born in 1946, Dennis "began his creative career at seven as an elf on the radio." A U of T graduate, he lived in England between 1969 and 1974 and published four novels, wrote plays for the BBC, etc. In typical transplanted Canadian style, he now lives in California. At present he's on a cross-Canada tour to promote The Periwinkle Assault, which PaperJacks seems to think is funny.

The U.S. titles in the group divide neatly into the categories of Romance in an Exotic Locale, Those Nazis Again, and Beautiful Wife Searches for Vanished Husband. They tempt one to wonder whether an aspiring writer wouldn't be better off conserving his or her energy and buying lottery tickets instead.

One final note: I was struck by the contrast between U.S and Canadian blurb-writing. "A tempestuous novel of devouring passion and sublime surrender," a U.S. writer will say. "The story of the women and men who took up land near Perth, Ontario, and built a community out of a wilderness," offers a Canadian. O Canada, it's good to know that somebody out there is still standing on guard for thee.

A Dream Coming too True in Alaska

By JACK SCOTT

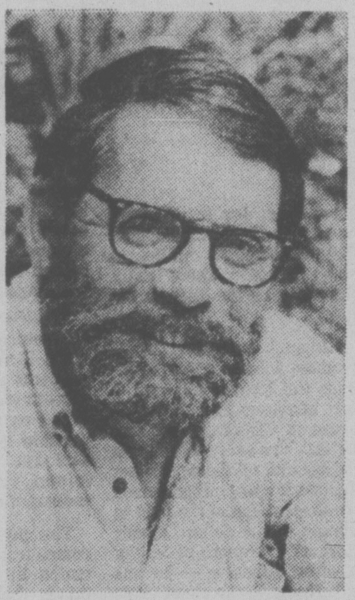
In a review here last year of The John McPhee Reader, a compilation of snippets from his dozen-odd best sellers, it was noted that few writers, past or present, have been so successful with subjects that seem calculated only to induce a yawn.

McPhee has made hypnotic books on canoes, the pumpkin seed, a pine forest and its inhabitants, a Scottish crofter, tennis, oranges, a retired basketball player, each far up in the best-read book lists and, more, an absolute delight to any reader whose first reaction is that he couldn't care less.

Now, with Coming Into the Country, McPhee has done it again. It is a book entirely about Alaska, at best of passing interest to the average man or woman. Yet this, again, is a splendid, fascinating, beautifully written and realized work of art. Whatever comes along it will surely be one of the best documentary books of 1978.

Unlike his previous works, McPhee has a genuine news peg here since a third of the book is devoted to the search for a new capital of the state. an often hilarious and cockeyed undertaking by a truly paranoid people. Since the publication of McPhee's work (most of which appeared originally in The New Yorker magazine) the nine-man Alaskan planning commission has, in fact, decided on a site to replace Juneau as the capital.

They propose to erect a kind of Brasilia of the north in a remote, largely unpopulated and quite beautiful valley near Mount McKinley, North America's highest peak, the closest major town being Anchorage. The estimated cost is close to $3 billion. With rosy, if unrealistic, dreams of future oil riches, there's not been the slightest consideration of the inland, ready-made capital of Brazil, a crumbling, empty, monumental ghost town, or just how a city will exist with a population largely composed of politicians and civil servants. Not since W. A. C. Bennett proposed the dream of a Wenner-Grenland in central British Columbia has there been such an impractical notion.



McPHEE . . . does it again

The new capital, expected to be completed in 1990, is described by one consultant as "an embodiment of what is best in Alaska," but McPhee, who saw the site with his own eyes, describes it as a kind of never-never land "where it is not unknown, in the dead of winter, for an old moose hunter to die in his cabin, and be brought into town frozen solid."

The author's account of this helicopter search, led by a sophisticated, wisecracking Eskimo who, at the age of 27, is head of the Alaskan Democratic party, reveals a sense of wry humor that appears rarely in McPhee's earlier work and gives him yet another dimension as a consummate writer.

This zany hunt for a capital site is presaged by a more familiar McPhee, a life-long river lover, in which his account of a hair-raising canoe and kayak trip with four companions through the Western Brooks range, well above the Arctic Circle, is a wonderfully descriptive telling of the remoteness of Alaska's ultimate wilderness.

This expedition alone gives the reader a sense of the sheer size of the country ("in 10 square miles of the state of New Jersey where I live there are more people than there are in the 586 thousand square miles of Alaska," McPhee notes) and may explain the myopic parochialism of its population ("In Alaska, McPhee found, "the conversation is Alaska.")

Western Canadians, in particular, will be interested in McPhee's account of how Alaska "solved" the problem of its native population. "Alaska," he notes, "has only about sixty thousand natives. They settled for a billion dollars and forty million acres of land. The legislation that accomplished this (and a great deal more) was the Alaska native Claims Settlement Act, of 1971. Among events of significance in the history of Alaska, this one probably stands even higher than the Statehood Act, and the treaty of purchase, for it not only changed forever the status and much of the structure of native societies; it opened the way to the Trans-Alaska Pipeline, which is only the first of many big-scale projects envisioned by development-minded Alaskans, and, like a jewel cutter's chisel cleaving a rough diamond, it effected the whole division, subdivision, patenting, parcelling, and deeding out of physiographic Alaska."

He wrties, too, of the current dilemma of the far north, a battle between big interests and the freedom-hunting settler who wanted things left as they were, a battle in which Washington clearly favors the big interests.

"After some years, and under pressure to find new energy resources," McPhee found, "the federal government awakened to the potentialities of Alaska. With the development of the oil field at Prudhoe Bay, state and federal interests at least seemed to complement each other. The discovery of oil felt like the disc)very of gold, and the future seemed lighted from behind. With the pipeline, however, Alaska suddenly had more development than it could absorb. It suddenly had manifold inflaton and a glut of trailer parks. It had traffic jams. You could pick up a telephone and 'dial a date.' In the reasonably accessible bush, fishing and hunting — the sorts of things many people had long sought in Alaska — became crowded and poor. A boom was on, money was around, and buildings were going up; but a dream may have come too true. Most of the money was passing over the heads of Alaskans long established in the state. Confused and disillusioned, many were forced to ponder if big-scale development meant bonanza after all."

In the final third of Coming Into the Country, perhaps the most unforgettable, the author writes of a winter in the tiny settlement of Eagle, just north of the Canadian border ("a community deeply compressed in its own isolation, where a cup of borrowed sugar can go off like a grenade") and of those eccentrics who live in cabins along the Yukon River and the gold-bearing creeks that feed it.

Almost all of these men and women are refugees, so to speak, from "the lower 48" and "coming into the country" is, in fact, the way they describe their move to Alaska and the seeking of a new way of life away from the perils of civilization.

McPhee writes of their gamble in trapping or searching for the elusive gold — and some adapt very well — with a journalistic eye for exactitude ("Harry is the kind of man who shakes Tabasco on his beans") and with a compassion that brings the strangest recluse to life. Those chapters which deal with the shrill conservationists and a bureaucracy that hears them all too plainly are, in themselves, enough to make any city reader think again.

It is no small praise to conclude that what Pierre Berton's Klondike was, in an historical sense, to the Yukon gold rush, McPhee's book is to modern Alaska.

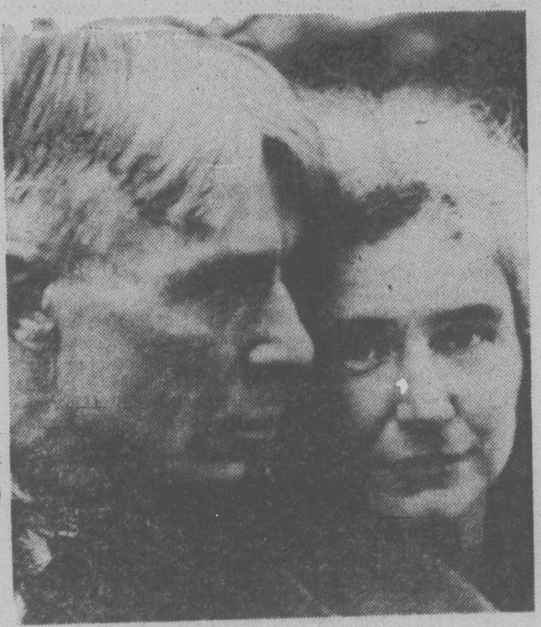
COMING INTO THE COUNTRY, by John McPhee. McGraw-Hill Ryerson. $12.50.

A Real Love Story

By JOHN BARKHAM

Carl Sandburg was a proletarian troubadour round the turn of the century, a Swedish immigrants' son from Galesburg, Illinois who read to audiences of all kinds the free verse he had written because he couldn't get it printed. At the same time he was courting Lilian Steichen, daughter of Luxembourgian immigrants and sister of the later-to-be-famous photographer Edward Steichen. In 1908 they were married, a happy union that lasted till death. For her Sandburg was a "wunderkind." For him she was "a woman of a million names and a thousand faces."

The story of their marriage is told by their daughter Helga. It is a warm and affectionate recollection based on personal memories, old letters and papers, and other memorabilia preserved in the family chest. Helga can and does speak at first hand of her parents' feeling for each other. "I know that my father had been burned by love of my mother when he first saw her and never got over it." Judging by the correspondence between them which she quotes that word "never" is no exaggeration. Sandburg wrote dozens of romantic poems about his wife recalling fresh aspects of her appearance, character and personality. Their story is a love story in the fullest sense of the term.



Carl Sandburg and Lilian Steichen

Sandburg quit school at 13 and went out proselytizing for the socialist cause until he was 20, when he spent four years in college but left without a degree. (He was awarded over 30 honorary degrees later.) The first Sandburg home was a cottage on the shores of Lake Michigan, where daughter Helga remembers her father writing on a deck built out from the attic, his typewriter resting on an orange crate. At night he'd read his poems to the family or quote some of the definitions of poetry he was forever composing. The most evocative example cited in the book reads: "Poetry is a spot about halfway between where you listen and where you wonder what it was you heard."

Judging by her mother's letters to her father, especially those just before they were married, it seems clear that Lilian Steichen possessed a writing talent of her own. Helga Sandburg does not share the view held by some that this talent was smothered by her father's greater gift. She believes her mother made her own conscious decision to adopt the traditional role of a wife in marriage with the husband dominant. "I know," she adds, "it made their home a tranquil one."

Sandburg's recognition as poet really dates from the time Harriet Monroe accepted his Chicago poems, including the one that later became famous, beginning: "Hog butcher for the world . . ." Her father had been strongly influenced by Walt Whitman's exuberant, free-flowing verse apostrophizing the land, freedom, the People. Its sweep and vitality reflected the optimism of a nation that had not yet been disillusioned by the Great Depression. Later came the highly praised, extremely successful biography of Lincoln which won a Pulitzer Prize.

By this time Carl Sandburg had become a public monument, the archetypal Great American of craggy mien and indisputable achievement along with contemporaries like Robert Frost and Frank Lloyd Wright. At this point Helga Sandburg's book ends: her father had passed from the family to the nation.

On January 16, 1978, it was a hundred years since Sandburg's birth. Daughter Helga has marked the occasion without pomp or grandiloquence but with an affectionate remembrance of her parents' life together and her father's "fire of genius burning."

A GREAT AND GLORIOUS ROMANCE: The Story of Carl Sandburg and Lilian Steichen, by Helga Sandburg. Longman. $16.95.

Three Histories Dressed in Fictional Garb

By ANTHONY JENKINS

"History is bunk," said Henry Ford, as he set his own mark upon the records of the 20th century. I trust he lived to regret those words. In any case, history remains an unending source of speculation for readers of both fact and fiction, as is evident from three recent novels of widely diverging scope and intent.

Xavier Herbert's Poor Fellow My Country is an epic account of Australia's emergence into full nationhood between the First World War and the present day. Its enormous bulk, some 1,500 closely printed pages, may discourage some readers. But I hope not since, although it contains some difficult passages which lambaste the politicians of the period, it is nonetheless an exceptional and beautiful work.

Herbert is a fierce defender of what he regards as the true Australia, its superhuman landscapes and its native culture. His enemies are European settlers, the "squattocracy", who have tried to shape the land into their own imported image, delivering its natural and human resources into the pockets of the British and then the Americans. The novel's many characters create a moving smile of the rape of a land and its people.

The major spokesman for the defence is Jeremy Delacey, an independent giant of a man whose homestead at Lily Lagoons in the Northern Territory has become an anomaly in a district where stockbreeding is firmly in the control of European combines.

He has lost his first wife to the president of one such company, his sons have gone with her, but his land is still his own. In defiance he had openly married a half-caste and made his farm a refuge for the sick and maimed victims, both human and animal, of the squattocracy.

The other major character is Prindy, Jeremy's grandson, who is a quarter aborigine. Those in authority, like his mother and various government officers, seem bent on making him fit into white society. His grandfather prefers to leave him be, to let him wander the bush under the tutelage of Cock-Eye Bob, the witchdoctor of the Rainbow-snake Cult, who can show him his roots in the myths and ways of his race. Without that inheritance, Prindy would become like his half-breed cousins and the white squattocracy, "a bloody nutchin".

The book's beauty and strength devolve from Herbert's astonishing sympathy for the essence of the land and its myths. This is the experience of 70 years, part of which was spent working with the aborigines. He shows us the sophisticated otherness of Prindy's intelligence as he emerges from a ragamuffin of the shanties in Beatrice River into an initiate of the Dream Road of his ancestors.

The book's weakness comes from the long sermons that Jeremy is given in order to voice Herbert's own views. This is both clumsy and irritating, since it makes Jeremy impossibly all-knowing. But once he travels to the southern cities to put those ideas into action with the formation of the Free Australia Party, he becomes vulnerable and the novel finds a new direction. We see him caught between Fascists and Communists, used by enemies and friends, yet doggedly holding his ground.

The last section of the novel deals with the Japanese attack on Port Palmeston (read Darwin?). We watch the bunglings of officialdom, the headlong flight of a populace unwilling to defend a land to which they do not truly belong, and we are shown the parallels between the downtrodden aborigines and the Jewish refugees from Nazi Germany.

All the main characters are swept into this political turmoil and are forced to confront the land itself in order to survive. The denouement is both exciting and unsentimental. When it's over we are left with the same problems: aborigines forced into the whiteman's pattern, the land torn apart for its mineral wealth, foreigners in control. Yet the last pages continue to shout defiance: There is still time to save the little that is left.

Although the book is entirely about Australia — it's perhaps the Australian novel — it is, of course, singularly relevant to Canada. Here, too, writers are searching for an indigenous mythology to set against foreign influence and the destruction of the land in pursuit of the dollar. Xavier Herbert's strength of feeling is often offensive — he has ugly things to say about Churchill, the monarchy, the Americans, the "Australians" themselves — but he refuses to be ignored.

In contrast to this sprawling epic, Jennifer Johnston's Shadows On Our Skin provides a miniature picture of the current state of affairs in Northern Ireland. All her novels are notable for their spare narrative line. The latest is a deceptively unassuming account of a young boy's experiences in Londonderry.

Joe Logan's growing-up is complicated by flames in the night sky. He is also torn between a disappointed mother who can only offer him tired, wordless sympathy, and a father who remembers past glories of rebellion amidst the drunken wreckage of his present life.

These conflicts deepen on the return of Joe's brother from England. But Miss Johnston chooses to remain objectively on the surface of things as she plots the relationship between the family and Joe's school-teacher friend against the background of religious strife.

The power of the novel comes from the spaces in between the characters: the things that are left unsaid, the events that are partly hinted at. Also effective are certain lyric episodes in the countryside which are delicately placed against the constant rumble of war in the city.

Without sensationalism, Johnston shows how the rhythms of war have become a part of everyday life in Northern Ireland. Her plot is ordinary, a little banal even, but its execution is striking and true.

The third novel, Catherine Gaskin's The Summer Of The Spanish Woman, is unabashed romance. The Irish sea crashes against the sand, the man and the stallion approach along the shore, and the heroine is forever in love with the new Lord Bldmore who has arrived to take possession of her grandfather's crumbling mansion in Country Wicklow.

It would be easy to "send up" this colorful story of "wild madness", but Miss Gaskin's a mistress of the genre. Victoria Holt, look to your laurels! Her heroine, Charlotte, is level-headed, independent and surprisingly unromantic, and this acts as a restraint upon the blood and passion of the plot.

Charlotte and her mother leave Ireland for Spain, and the story of how she earns the respect of the cruel and proud aristocracy of Jerez is leavened by events that push Spain into the 20th century. Usually the romance uses history simply as a stage-setting, and Miss Gaskin's account of the First World War and the Irish Rebellion is little more than local color. However, history becomes an integrated part of the story with the rumblings that precede the Spanish Civil War. It's this which distinguishes the book from its purely escapist compeers.

The novel also gains a sense of place and time from the descriptions of the sherry trade. At moments her insistence on those details reveals the author's effort at authenticity, but more frequently the intricacies of the vintage help to define Charlotte's emergence as a matriarch among the proud. By the book's end the heroine has grown into something more than a cardboard character and we're given glimmerings of emotions that led to the struggle for Spain.

So, Mr. Ford, history still has its uses.

Exploits sorrow of tormented princess

As I write this the still-hapdsome 63-year-old Peter Townsend is crossing Canada to promote his autobiography, Time and Chance. To make a few honest bucks, which the poor fellow sorely needs, he is submitting himself to the twin ordeals of radio interviews and autographing sessions — assailed by funny ha-ha, ill-prepared talk show hosts asking embarrassing questions, and then by coy, elderly matrons, trembling with pleasure, who willingly part with $16.95 for the thrill of exchanging inane chit-chat with a romantic historical footnote.

Meanwhile, back in England, a puffy-eyed, grossly overweight 47-year-old Princess Margaret moves unhappily from palace to palace suffering her own twin ordeals of press sensationalism and incessant pressure from family and politicians to end her pathetic attachment to a feckless 30-year-old wastrel.

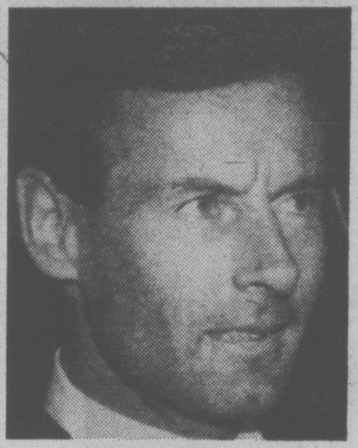
That the massive publicity surrounding Princess Margaret's current distress should be helping to promote a book which tells part of the story of her first and only real love is a supremely ironical twist in the uscripted royal soap opera which has now been running intermittently for 25 years.

Like the ill-fated Mary, Queen of Scots, Margaret is an incurable romantic and a born loser, so how the soap opera will end is anyone's guess. Meanwhile, I have problems of my own: how to deal with Townsend's book and another fortuitously-timed biography — Margaret: The Tragic Princess, by James Brough. To simplify matters I will deal with the latter book first because that won't take long.

James Brough, a native of England who now lives in the U.S., is an elderly hack writer who grubs a living by writing popular biographies of well-known people, using selective material from published sources. Like all his kind he compensates for his ignorance by adopting an offensive familiarity. Thus, King George VI is always "Bertie", Queen Elizabeth is "Lil" and Margaret is "Meg" or "Maggie".

When I tell you that Brough's style is a sickening mixture of bitchy Louella Parsons at her best and cloying Victoria Holt at her worst and that his main sources were the lurid London Daily Mirror and the discredited "Crawfie" (Marion Crawford, nurse to "the little princesses") I am informing you politely that this book is junk.

Peter Townsend's autobiography is certainly not junk, but it's not great literature either. Although he has published three other books his style remains somewhat amateurish. He writes engagingly with a sort of well-bred boyish charm, but one senses that he is always holding back, driving with the brakes on, determined not to offend or bruise anyone's feelings. This is jolly decent of him but, unfortunately, this gentlemanly attitude makes for bloodless prose and a wishy-washy narrative.



TOWNSEND . . . wishy-washy

Apart from his birth in Burma, where his father was a senior British, administrator, Townsend's early life was conventional: carefree years in Devonshire, preparatory school, and Haileybury, a good public (private) school.

From Haileybury he went in 1933 to the Royal Air Force College at Cranwell as a cadet. Two years later, when he was 20, he received his commission and became a fighter pilot. There followed four years of peacetime service at home and abroad and four years of active war service. All this and more is wrapped up in 42 pages.

Actually, he covers the war years in a scant 14 pages. These provide a moving and convincing evocation of aerial warfare and leave the reader wanting more. The reason for the brevity of this passage, I presume, is not Townsend's reluctance to tell of his own exploits, for he mentions these, but an assumption that everyone has read Duel of Eagles, his own book about the Battle of Britain.

The next sequence — about 70 pages — covers the eight years he spent as equerry to King George VI, a demanding and heady post which effectively cut him off from normal life and, inevitably, wrecked his first marriage.

It's always entertaining to read about life behind the scenes in the royal residences and during royal tours and Townsend repeatedly shows that he could be very entertaining indeed, if only he would let himself go. He always goes just so far and when the reader's interest is fully aroused he tapers off in his gentlemanly way by suppressing what you want to hear.

Again, this reticence is not due to reluctance to spare the feelings of the royal family but to the fact that he has already covered this ground in a previous book, The Last Emperor, and, of course, it's bad form to repeat oneself. It is also bad form to have the arrogance to assume everyone has read all your books.

At the age of 44 Townsend remarried, this time choosing a beautiful Belgian girl of 19. They have now been married for 19 years and have three teenage children. Marie-Luce Townsend appears to be a brilliant and fascinating person, but we're not given the opportunity to meet her properly as the whole 19-year marriage is cursorily wrapped up in only six pages. Perhaps he's saving that up for his next book.

The remainder of the autobiography — almost 100 pages — concerns the Princess Margaret affair, Townsend's exile, and his efforts to create for himself a new life before finally remarrying and settling down to write for a living.

Most of those buying this book will have done so precisely in order to read Townsend's version of his frustrated romance with Princess Margaret and I imagine they will not be too pleased to discover that this has been glossed over in 11 pages. The star-crossed pair did meet discreetly from time to time after Townsend was sent into exile, but until the affair finally ended officially after a few years Townsend was hounded by the world's press and this aspect takes up the bulk of this central section of the book.

Townsend describes his feelings for the royal family in general, and Princess Margaret in particular, with honesty and dignity, but the self-pity he felt after the romance was ended is not particularly edifying; Margaret was the real victim, for she never got over the shock.

Townsend distinguished himself as a fighter pilot during the Battle of Britain, but then so did many others. Apart from that his life has not been all that unusual, except for the period when he was equerry to a king and won the heart of a princess. That is the period we want to know about in full, but Group-Captain Charming has chosen to regard the subject as too painful to the principals to be aired at lenghth.

If that's how he feels, fine — but why write his autobiography? Who the hell does he think he is? If it hadn't been for the Margaret affair few people would ever have learned of Townsend's existence. Certainly, without the link to Margaret he would not have been able to make a living as a civilian, either as writer or in business, where he was unable to contribute anything but his name.

If he was unwilling to tell all he should not have said anything. This nobody, who for a brief period was a somebody, has in fact exploited the sorrow of a tormented princess to peddle his own ordinary story, an act this ex-courtier would pompously deprecate if someone else had perpetrated it.

More, More, More — We're Caught in an Age-old Trap

By JULIAN REID

Last year, John Pfeiffer published The Emergence of Man, a brilliantly comprehensive overview of all that is currently known or conjectured about the controversial topic of the origin of civilization. It is a volume that is likely to remain definitive in its field for years to come.

Alongside it, Marvin Harris' Cannibals and Kings stands as a much less balanced and comprehensive treatment of the same subject — but one that nevertheless deserves your attention as a very stimulating complement to Pfeiffer's wide-ranging study. For while there are a number of important factors which Harris glosses over or neglects entirely in his discussion, within its limits he has produced an illuminating and exceptionally provocative book.

Harris is an American anthropologist, best known to the general public as the author of Cows, Pigs, Wars and Witches, a delightfully original excursion into what he calls "the riddles of culture." There, with varying degrees of success, he set about demonstrating that many apparently irrational cultural manifestations — among them the cow-worship of India, the Kwakiutl potlatch, and the witchhunts of Medieval Europe, not to mention such more fundamental aberrations as male superiority and institutionalized warfare — are in fact rationally explicable as social adaptations to environemtal pressures, "the cultural equivalents of thermostats, safety valves, and circuit breakers."

Cannibals and Kings develops this notion further, drawing on many of the same illustrative examples, but this time applying them systematically to the interconnected problems of the origins of agriculture, the centralized state, and modern industrial capitalism. "My purpose," the author proclaims, "is to replace the old onwards-and-upwards Victorian view of progress with a more realistic account of cultural evolution" — and, not so incidentally, one that flies straight in the face of the reigning conventional wisdom relating to social and economic topics.

Briefly, Harris' thesis is that the entire history of civilization so far is explicable in terms of a single fundamental mechanism: "the tendency to intensify production." Ever since the end of the last Ice Age, some 12,000 years ago the pattern has been consistently the same — and our only hope for a better future lies in recognizing the age-old trap for what it is, and doing our level best to extricate ourselves from it.

It works, Harris claims, like this: A group of people somehow win their way into a new-found paradise of peace and plenty. They respond by being fruitful and multiplying; and so, in order to suport their increasing numbers, they have to work progressively harder at exploiting the limited resources available to them.

At last, inevitably, they run up against some sort of natural limits to growth — a point where their natural and social environents begin to deteriorate under the pressure of their increasing numbers. (This, needless to say, is the point that industrial civilization has reached today.) Slowly at first, then faster and ever faster, living standards decline. Finally, conditions become unbearable — and at this point, with luck, the society achieves some kind of social or technical breakthrough which serves to free it, temporarily, from its ecological strait-jacket, initiating a new era of comfort and prosperity.

But alas, it never lasts. The result is another population-explosion — and so the entire vicious cycle begins over again.

Only if we can turn our backs on the eternally seductive siren-songs of "progress" and unlimited economic growth, Harris insists, can there be any real hope for our troubled future. If we continue on the way we are going, we will simply end up by repeating the same mistakes over again.
